ASKS FURTHER ARGUMENTS IN SPY HEARING

Supreme Court 'Leans Over Backwards' To Avoid Axis Brand of Justice.

QUESTION CIVIL RIGHTS

Defense, Prosecution Argue Status of Saboteurs Under Laws.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Apparently leaning over backwards to avoid any taint of the summary proceedings that pass for "justice" in Axis lands, the supreme court called for further arguments today (at noon, E. W. T.) in the fantastic case of seven men who stole ashore here from German U-boats with the schooling and equipment for sabotage—and when captured announced they were refugees.

The prime question before the court—raised by petitions for habeas corpus to deliver the prisoners from a military commission before which President Roosevelt placed them—was whether men such as these were entitled to the protection of civil courts as a matter of right.

Certainly not, contended Attorney General Biddle. War "wipes out the rights of the alien," he asserted, and any "relief he may be entitled to in a court depends on the grace of the sovereign."

But yes, the men do have rights, argued Col Kenneth C. Royall, one of several army officers assigned to the defense. He insisted that even if the prioners be soldiers of the reich they could claim the shelter of the bill of rights while in this country.

A regiment of German soldiers caught landing on these shores would not have those rights, Royall conceded in response to questions from the bench which frequently interspersed the six hours of argument heard yesterday as the case opened. But the soldiers, he explained, would have other rights as prisoners of war—rights these defendants cannot claim.

The questions from the court made it clear that it sought to explore every possible claim the prisoners might have to rights both military and civil. Seven judges are hearing the case. Justice Douglas did not arrive from Oregon in time for the opening session and Justice Murphy disqualified himself because of his present military status.

Hopkins Takes a Wife at Noon In White House

WASHINGTON —(INS)— Harry Hopkins, the angular righthand man of President Roosevelt was to take a bride at high noon today in the White House which he has known as home for the last few years.

Mrs. Louise Gill Macy, New York socialite and fashion authority, arrived in Washington last evening to join her groom and assist Mrs. Roosevelt in supervising final arrangements for the ceremony.

It was probable the president would stand as best man for the one time social worker from Iowa who started his government career as WPA director, then became secretary of commerce and now

Japs Are Well-Equipped, Hardened and Ingenious, So Don't Under-Estimate Them Say Two War Correspondents

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Here is a balance sheet of the Pacific war by two veteran Far Eastern correspondents of the United Press.)

By RICHARD WILSON and ROBERT BELLAIRE
(United Press Staff Correspondents)

LOURENCO MARQUES, Portuguese East Africa—(Delayed)—Don't under-estimate the Japanese. There is no easy road to victory in the Pacific war.

That is the conclusion of two American reporters who reached this neutral port en route to New York after years of service in the Far East and six months of Japanese internment.

We and our Allies are fighting a strong, well-prepared foe. He has seized vast potential resources. He is grinding millions of people, including his own, under maximum hardships to exert the greatest possible military strength against us. He will risk anything and everything in this all or nothing gamble.

Victory over such a foe requires willingness to match the Japanese in effort, determination and sacrifice.

En route to Lourenco Marques, we compared notes and tried to reach conclusions that might help our countrymen understand what we are up against in this war; what the enemy has been able to achieve and to what extremes he has gone and is prepared to go.

The Japanese war lords have spent years building up and testing a war machine designed to conquer Asia and overcome western influence and prestige. They are ingenious and have the aid of capable technicians and inventors. (It would be a grave error to regard them as mere imitators.) They are ready to fight on for years if necessary; to strike at Russia when and if the right moment arrives.

Nazi Armies Racing Toward Caspian Sea

Pour Through Soft Spot In Red Defense East of Rostov; Soviets Beat Off Attempts to Hammer Wedges In Lines Around Stalingrad.

(By Associated Press)

Adolf Hitler's invasion armies, racing toward the Caspian sea, reported today they had cut the last major rail line to the Caucasus oil fields, while in the north the Russians declared they had beaten off all German attempts to hammer wedges into Soviet lines above Stalingrad.

A Vichy (French) radio broadcast heard in London reported that German troops from the Crimea had crossed the narrow Kerch strait and landed at dawn today on the Taman peninsula of the Caucasus.

Such a movement would seriously endanger Russian forces stubbornly fighting to hold the German drive south into the Caucasus from Rostov.

Late dispatches indicated that the Germans had found a "soft spot" in the Russian defenses east of Rostov and were exerting their main efforts in a drive to isolate the Caucasus.

In a message to the Russian people Premier Joseph Stalin today invoked as inspiration in the present war against Germany the names of Russia's great heroes of the past, from Alexander Nevsky, who beat the ancient Teutonic knights, to Mikhail Kutuzov, whose dogged resistance made Napoleon's Russian invasion a failure.

"Let us be inspired in this war by the courageous images of our great ancestors, Nevsky, Donsky, Minin, Pozharsky, Suvorov and Kutuzov," said Stalin.

"Be inspired by the victorious banner of the great Lenin."

Meanwhile, amid widespread agitation for an Allied invasion of western Europe, Sir Stafford Cripps again told parliament in London that plans regarding a second front could not be divulged.

Sir Stafford, Prime Minister Churchill's spokesman in the house of commons, said the government would not be able to reveal such plans "even in secret session" but in response to a member's question, he added:

"I can tell him now, we have intentions."

London newspapers mentioned Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. Army chief of staff, as a possible Allied generalissimo for a second front.

In the Soviet campaign, the situation appeared to be growing rapidly more acute in the northern Caucasus, where the Russians acknowledged fresh Nazi advances at several points.

The German high command asserted broadly that the Russian line of retreat to the east had been cut off in the great Don river bend, but gave no details.

Dispatches to Red Star said a gigantic seven-day-old battle was raging in the Don bend above Stalingrad, involving thousands of troops, planes, field guns and tanks.

Red Star said the Germans reached the eastern bank of the river in one sector but were driven back.

Prayda, the Communist party newspaper, said Germany now was throwing her last resources into the great summer offensive.

"The enemy is not so strong as he appears to some scared panicmongers," Pravda said.

6 SOLONS BACK MOVE TO BETTER WAR INDUSTRY

Only One of Seven Contacted Declines Comment on Council Co-operation Pledge.

Adding their voice to those of others in the campaign to better Mansfield's industrial position in war time, six members of city council who could be reached today pledged co-operation of the city government.

Outspoken in asserting that the city ought to bear its share of the burden, First Ward Councilman Russell D. Porch pointed out that industrial expansion, or the obtaining of a new car industry might involve the possible outlay of thousands of dollars for extension of various municipal services to accommodate a large-scale enterprise and declared "council should, and I think will go 'all out' for any worth-while expansion of Mansfield's industrial war effort."

Speaking for the administration, Mayor W. J. Locke asserted "We'll go along on anything worth-while."

Porch's statement was made in response to a query on his attitude toward a resolution to be introduced by George C. Kyle, fellow-councilman at the Aug. 4 meeting, calling for a "pledge of co-operation" to bring more war industry to Mansfield.

Only one council member contacted—C. N. Shultz of Ward 2—declined to make any statement whatever.

Michael Mihalick of Ward 4 declared himself 100 per cent behind any worthy war effort while Fifth Ward's Fred Miller, sr., avowed he'd "go a thousand miles out of his way" to support such a movement. Other members interviewed are equally enthusiastic.

Following publication of a series of articles about Marion's and Newark's successful war efforts in Pelley Subpenas Flier To Aid Trial Defense.

INDIANAPOLIS — (AP) — William Dudley Pelley, former silver shirt leader on trial for sedition, yesterday subpoenaed several outstanding national figures, including Charles A. Lindebergh, as witnesses to aid in his defense.

Pelley also requested the calling of Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the federal reserve board, together with "any and all statements" showing the "gross worth" of the United States as of, or as near as possible to, Dec. 31, 1941 and Jan. 12, 1942.

The request still required the approval of Judge Robert C. Blatzell but Oscar R. Ewing, special prosecutor, said the prosecution would not oppose it if the defense insisted Eccles' testimony was necessary.

ADJOURNS RADIO HEARING AFTER RUBIN TESTIFIES

Principal Owner Quizzed on Loans Given Station Prior To Officer Change.

Although he testified he had put money into Richland, Inc., owner of radio station WMAN in Mansfield, before the station was on the air and several times after the station was opened in 1939, M. F. Rubin, now president and principal owner of the company, said on the witness stand at a federal communications commission hearing today at the courthouse that he did not become interested in the venture as a stockholder until the spring of 1940.

The hearing on the station's request for a license renewal was adjourned at noon today after sessions lasting three and a half days. It will be resumed Aug. 27 before the federal communications commission in Washington. At that time evidence heard here will be submitted and any witnesses of the FCC or Richland, Inc., wants to present will be heard.

Following the session in Washington, Examiner P. W. Seward who heard the testimony here will submit an opinion to the FCC which will decide whether Richland, Inc., is entitled to a license renewal for WMAN. Seward said it may be several weeks after the final hearing before a decision is handed down.

On the stand most of yesterday afternoon, through a two-hour session last night, and for more than an hour this morning Rubin was questioned at length by FCC Attorney Donald Harris about his early interests in the station and Purses Stolen, Radio Taken, Car Window Broken; Woman Scares Away Intruder.

Mansfield police today were investigating another wave of petty thefts in the city yesterday when two purses were snatched from downtown business establishments, a radio was stolen from an East First street home and an automobile window was broken in an attempt to gain entrance.

Mrs. Harry Holmes, McElroy road resident, sustained the greatest loss when her purse containing two wrist watches valued at $100 was stolen from the hosiery counter while she was shopping in a downtown store. The purse also

Bill to Mobilize Manpower of U. S. Being Drawn Up

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — A proposed manpower mobilization bill is being drafted as a result of a study made by War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt at the request of President Roosevelt, White House Secretary Stephen T. Early said today.

The study was undertaken to determine how the best and most efficient use could be made of the nation's available manpower and how it should be divided among the armed forces, war industries and essential civilian work.

Early would not discuss any details of the bill now being drafted but it has been widely reported that any mobilization plan would involve a complete registration of all available workers, women as well as men.

How far the plan under consideration would go toward the ultimate end of assigning all workers to specific tasks in war, agricultural or civilian industries could not be ascertained immediately.

Pittsburgh Press Acts After Truck Drivers Strike.

PITTSBURGH — (INS) — Publication of the Pittsburgh Press was suspended today after the newspaper's truck drivers walked out on strike for the third time in the past six weeks over the dismissal of 14 fellow employes.

A management statement said the 14 drivers had been laid off to comply with government regulations requiring a 25 per cent reduction in truck mileage. The statement also accused the local drivers of refusing to obey contract provisions or international officers.

The management said it had made every effort to reach a peaceful agreement in the past and stood ready to deal with any responsible group in the future, but added:

"Beyond this we cannot go. We cannot publish under mob rule."

They were: Russell Vonaty, 8, who slipped off a raft in a Cleveland sand pit; Harland J. Chidsey, 35, of Roswell, a Massillon steelworker, who was swimming in the Atwood dam lake near New Philadelphia, and James Marvin Griffin, 10, wading in the Mad river at Springfield.

College Professor Stopped Twice as German Saboteur

A Minnesota college professor is probably convinced today that authorities in this vicinity are really on their toes when it comes to keeping their eyes open for saboteurs.

En route to Washington to accept a government position there, a member of the faculty of St. Thomas college in St. Paul, Minn., was picked up twice last night on suspicion of being Rheinhold Rudolph Barth, German saboteur, to whom he bears remarkable physical resemblance.

He was stopped first yesterday evening by Bucyrus police who, after close questioning and examination of his papers, permitted him to go on. Thirteen miles further on his way, alert Crestline police took him into custody. He was held here for five hours while police, state highway patrolmen from the Mansfield post, and Cleveland FBI agents made complete investigation before turning him loose.

Barth, for whom authorities mistook the traveler, is a trained Nazi saboteur possibly in this country. Both men have brown hair, wear rimless glasses, speak with accents and have similar features. A difference of several inches in height was practically the only distinction between the two.

SCOURGE: RAF Concentrates On Nazi Rail, Industrial City

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—A strong force of British bombers, striking at Germany for the seventh time in 10 nights, did great damage in a concentrated attack last night on Saarbruecken, German steel manufacturing center near the French border, the air ministry announced today.

Nine planes were lost in the assault—the first on Saarbruecken since Nov. 8, 1940—the announcement said. Saarbruecken is a key railway junction as well as an industrial city.

Nazi air raiders, meanwhile, attacked widely separated areas in Britain, dropping a few bombs in the greater London area for the first time since June 3 and stabbing at several points in the Midlands and East Anglia.

One of the Nazi targets in the Midlands was the industrial center of Birmingham where, the ministries of air and home security said, the raiders did some damage and caused some casualties.

Seven of the German planes were shot down, a communique said.

The RAF raids on western Germany were accompanied by a heavy aerial bombardment of the occupied French coast between Boulougne and Calais.

Observers on the English southeast coast said that relays of big British bombers sped over the channel in a steady procession throughout the moonlit night, and the thunder of bomb blasts on the French shore reverberated across Dover strait.

Saarbruecken, a city with a peacetime population of about 135,000, lies in the heart of the great Saar valley coal fields, and is one of the chief centers of iron and steel production in Germany.

CHECKED: Jap Thrust Toward Port Moresby Halted by Allies

(By International News Service)

GEN. DOUGLAS MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia—The Japanese thrust by land toward Port Moresby was reported checked today after Allied patrols drove advancing enemy columns from the Kokoda heights in Papau, New Guinea.

The enemy incursion was brought to a halt at a point approximately halfway between new Jap bases on the coast of Papua and Port Moresby, advanced United Nations base 100 miles distant.

While land forces sought to smash the Japs back along the jungle road across the Owen Stanley range from Kokoda, some 60 miles from Moresby, United Nations fliers increased their efforts to wipe out the enemy coastal bases at Gona and Buna.

During one heavy air assault along the coast, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced, Allied bombers damaged and probably sank a Japanese destroyer.

The Japanese destroyer was heading for shore when last seen, and a trail of heavy smoke indicated it had been seriously damaged by a direct hit.

Relays of Allied planes shuttled over the narrow tip of New Guinea to bomb the Japanese base established last week in the Gona-Buna area, 100 miles from the

HUGE AIRBASE BUILT SECRETLY IN AUSTRALIA

Depot Covers 30 Square Miles and Has Facilities For Repairing Planes.

(By Wide World)

SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA—A huge airplane repair depot and base, equipped to salvage allied planes damaged in battles and big enough to handle the United Nations' largest aircraft, has been constructed in record time at an undisclosed Australian site.

In giving details of the new and urgently needed depot, Brig. Gen. Hugh J. Casey, U. S. engineering officer, also disclosed that the United States army in cooperation with the Allied Works Council, has built at least 200 airfields and thousands of miles of new strategic highways in the commonwealth during the last few months.

General Casey, one of the army officers who came here with General MacArthur from the Philippines, outlined a tremendous plan for expansion of air field facilities.

Construction to date, he said, has by no means exhausted the plan.

Australians hailed the massive new air port as one of the greatest engineering jobs ever undertaken in the commonwealth and proudly declared that even Americans who were associated with the project "were astounded at the speed at which the work was done."

Constructed in four months at a cost of about $8,750,000, the big base covers 30 square miles, has 450 buildings including hangers and workshops, and is lined with runways able to accommodate the largest aircraft in Australia.

Americans, too, had a hand in its construction. It was built under the direction of the Allied Works Council, an agency composed of both Americans and Australians which undertakes work vital to the Allied war effort.

Salvaging of damaged planes already has started. When placed in full operation, the airdrome will be manned by several thousand skilled air force technicians.

The 2,650 members of the Civil Construction corps engaged in building the base represented the largest number of workmen employed simultaneously on such a job. Never before had so much money been spent in such a short period in the commonwealth.

The job of military construction in Australia is an enormous one, Casey explained, because of a shortage of labor, plant and construction material. The huge size of the commonwealth and its small population provide additional problems.

"Military operations impose a terrific strain upon the existing communications, and as a result Australia has a difficult supply problem," he said.

The country's lack of a uniform railway gauge between its major centers also has to be considered.

Casey said Australia's immediate requirements included construction of more air fields, building of roads and provisions of railway sidings to enable supplies to be rushed to any menaced areas; improvement of port facilities and the speeding up of the unloading of cargoes, and construction of depots for the storage of reserve supplies.

In the meantime, he concluded, air base construction is given No.1 priority.

HONEY GOES IN MOUNTAIN DEW

ASHBORO, N. C. — (INS) — Strained honey and refined molasses are the newest ingredients of mountain dew in the Patterson Mill section of Randolph County, Alcohol Tax Unit investigators learned when they raided a still near Ashboro.

The moonshiners, evidently being patriotic by saving on sugar had 17 half-gallons of strained honey and 5 half-gallons of molasses to be used for sweetening.

Unimpressed with the moonshiners' efforts to conserve sugar, the investigators destroyed the still, 500 gallons of honey-molasses-bran shorts mash and 10 barrel fermenters. They also arrested two alleged moonshiners.

PHILADELPHIA — (U.P.) — Audubon Hall, the gallery of birds of the world being assembled in the Academy of the Natural Sciences, will be as complete as it is possible to make it—even to the bird on Nellie's hat.

"The bird on the bonnet has been so conspicuous in feminine fashion that its preservation in history should not be left to the poular song made famous on the stage by Marie Dressler," argued R. Meyer deSchauensee, curator of birds.

With that in mind, deSchauensee included a typical milliner's creation of 1906, topped with a tern from the academy's bird collection.

JAPS ABLE FOE, WRITERS WARN

Correspondents Say Enemy Well-Equipped, Tough and Ingenious.

The Japanese military machine is well-equipped. The soldiers are tough, often savage, and well trained for particular tasks, although they show up best in team-like routine operations and may crack up when caught off guard or when confused by a surprise attack or unexpected maneuver.

The fighting at Hongkong offers an interesting example. The Japanese had prepared for the attack for years. Their methods, such as sneaking through old sewer tunnels as the artillery and air attack began, were well coordinated. Their soldiers each had rubber shoes for quiet movement and to cling to the rugged hills.

But when something goes wrong or when something unexpected occurs, the Japanese machine is less impressive. An example was the American bombing raid on Tokyo, which resulted in such confusion that the city's defenses seemed almost unable to operate and some anti-aircraft guns apparently fired on their own planes.

Japanese equipment, especially that used in China, has often been old or out-moded, but usually proved sufficient for the intended purpose except in aerial encounters with American fliers or in traps laid by the Chinese. But that must not be regarded as meaning that the enemy does not have new or up-to-date equipment.

The Japanese navy fighter plane, known as the Zero, copied the best features of western-built fighters, but Japanese mechanical ingenuity such as has been demonstrated frequently in industrial fields in the past, added certain important features to make the plane more suitable to Japan's requirements.

(The Zero had fatal weaknesses, primarily lack of protection for the pilot, if it was to engage in modern-type air warfare, but it accomplished its purpose in the East Indies fighting and later models used over Australia had corrected the armor deficiency.)

Not only the Japanes soldier but the Japanese people are hardened and toughened by their ordinary life. Their living standard, extremely low in comparison to western countries, alleviates for the time being at least the increasing hardships of war-time existence, the food shortages, the pegged wages, heavy taxes and an increase of perhaps 300 per cent in prices.

Communications have proved a serious weakness for the Japanese and should become an increasingly grave problem as American air and naval strength increases in the Pacific. A few Allied submarines this spring disrupted enemy shipping off Hongkong and the problem of maintaining railroad communications in occupied China has been tremendous and largely unsolved.

Railroad equipment is run down and Chinese scorched earth tactics have disrupted many lines in addition to breaks caused by guerrilla attacks.

Another enemy weakness that the Japanese war lords have made every effort to counteract is vulnerability to aerial attack at home. Progress is being made toward reducing the inflammability of Japanese cities by avoiding congestion in new sectors, but many great industrial areas at Navoya, Kobe and elsewhere are easy bomb targets.

There is no doubt now that calculated cruelty has been used in part to destroy western prestige in the Orient but also directed against Orientals. Only part of the story of maltreatment can be told now but our dispatches have cited specific instances of bayonetting wounded prisoners at Hongkong and maltreatment of Americans interned in China and Korea.

These primitive acts demonstrate the Japanese adaptation of Axis methods of all-out warfare against civilians as well as soldiers. They emphasize the ruthless, relentless foe we face. They warn that half-way measures won't win the war in the Pacific.

Scenes From Play Children Present Tomorrow

Against a natural background, the Children's theater will bring to life one of childhood's favorite fairy tales, "The Sleeping Beauty," Friday at 8:15 p. m. in South Park pavilion. Close to 60 boys and girls will appear in the evening's program under the direction of Harold McCuen. The presentation will be supplemented by a guest ballet of 26 from Ethyl Battin's dancing studio and a series of choric readings, including "The Pied Piper of Hamlin," by the entire Children's theater organization. The News-Journal cameraman caught the above scenes as rehearsals were under way. Posed upper left is Ethyl Battin, former Radio City Rockette, and her young daughter, Bonnie Rae Battin. Mrs. Battin will climax the ballet with the "Sleeping Beauty Waltz." A group from her ballet corps is shown upper right. Kneeling from left to right are June Imhoff, Sally Stoodt, Carol Enis, Peggy Bayer and Marjorie Van Allen. Standing are Marilyn Little and Hope Bromfield. A scene from "The Sleeping Beauty," lower left, shows Bettie Gibson, extreme right, as the wicked fairy attempting to wield an evil spell. Shown from left to right are "the queen," Jeannie Kroegher; "the king," Owen Hegarty; "the princess," Sally Rusk; "the good fairy," Jane Rowles; "the prince," James Gandert; and "the wicked fairy," Bettie Gibson. A group of scene painters and builders are shown at work at the lower right. From left to right, Sigrid Meisse, Miss Ruth Dukes, instructor; Carol Thompson, Richard DeSanze and William Gandert.

is recognized in every war capital of the world as an unquestioned spokesman for the White House.

Nicholas Ludington, a naval lieutenant, arrived on short leave to give his sister-in-law away and the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, Congregationalist minister from Connecticut, was on hand to receive the wedding vows.

At direction of the first lady, White House gardeners had thrown up a screen of greenery in the famed oval room study to serve as a backdrop for the ceremony and the White House cooks were busy preparing salmon-in-aspic and chicken for the ensuing wedding luncheon.

Meyer Davis brought in his dance orchestra to render such tunes as "I Married An Angel," "Tangerine," and "Buckle Down, Winsocki," to say nothing of a specially written number, "Song of Happiness."

The four Hopkins children—10-year-old Diana and the three grown sons, David, Stephen and Robert—were present to see their father take his third wife. Also were Mrs. Macy's two sisters, Mrs. Ludington and Gertrude Macy, secretary to Katharine Cornell.

In all there were only about 20 guests, most of them from the White House "family" of secretaries and aides.

Today's wedding was the first in the White House since Aug. 7, 1918, when Miss Alice Wilson, niece of the first World war president, became the bride of the Rev. Isaac Stuart McElroy.

Although Mrs. Roosevelt had done everything else, she confessed that thus far she had been unable to decide upon a suitable wedding present for "Harry" and his bride.

GERMANS CUT ROAD TO OIL OF CAUCASUS

Armies Race Toward Caspian Sea as Reds Hold Firm Around Stalingrad.

Front-line dispatches said Marshal Semeon Timoshenko was sending huge reserves of manpower into the struggle, while Nazi prisoners were quoted as saying that the Germans were forced to shift troops from other sectors of the front to bolster the Don river offensive.

A mid-day bulletin from Soviet headquarters indicated that the Germans, hurling waves of 40 to 50 tanks into a series of attacks, had gained some ground in the Kletskaya sector, 80 miles northwest of Stalingrad, but the communique added:

"All attempts by the Germans to drive wedges into our defenses failed."

This indicated that the Russians were doggedly holding their lines intact, slowly yielding where necessary, and frustrating the Nazi tactics of encirclement and annihilation.

Soviet troops were credited with destroying 123 tanks and killing 4,000 Germans in a half dozen engagements within the last 36 hours.

On the far southern front, where Gen. Fedor von Bock's armies are striking toward the Caucasus oil treasures, the Russians conceded fresh German gains in the Bataisk sector, 15 miles below Rostov-on-Don.

"Heavy fighting is going on," a Soviet communique said, referring to this region. "The enemy has launched several attacks and advanced in separate sectors."

A bulletin from Nazi field headquarters declared German troops had stormed and captured the town of Proletarskaya, 100 miles below the lower Don, thereby cutting the last direct rail line to the Caucasus oil fields. Oil may still be shipped, however, up the Caspian sea to the rail-river city of Astrakhan on the Volga.

The reported advance to Proletarskays meant that the Germans had now swept 100 miles southeast beyond Rostov in their drive to the Caspian, and the speed of the thrust across the steppes indicated that they were meeting little opposition. Proletarskaya is 175 miles southwest of Stalingrad.

Dispatches to Red Star, the Soviet army newspaper, emphasized the gravity of the situation, declaring.

"Only by a self-sacrificing struggle will we hold the enemy from the south."

In the battle of Egypt, British headquarters reported that land operations were again limited to minor patrol skirmishes and artillery fire, while dust storms restricted aerial activity.

Axis warplanes raided Cairo this morning, killing one person and inflicting slight property damage. Air-raid alarms also sounded in the Suez canal area and elsewhere in Egypt.

Reports Axis Sees 'Bottom of Its Oil'

NEW YORK—(AP)—The German high command already can see the bottom of its oil reserves, the Oil Weekly said today in a summary of Axis petroleum resources and supplies.

"There can be little doubt that the Axis of the west now is gravely concerned over its deficiency of oil," the Trade Journal said.

"The bitter fighting in southern Russia is a desperate struggle for oil, as well as a part of a supreme effort to dispose of an exasperating enemy," the Oil Weekly added.

Basing its figures on known statistics and calculations of use, the magazine estimated Germany had for its present Russian campaign about 2,000,000 tons of fuel oil. It estimated Germany used 12,500,000 tons in 23 weeks of Russian war last summer and fall.

Axis Bombs Hit Cairo Outskirts

CAIRO — (U P) — Axis warplanes swept over the center of Cairo early today through bursts of heavy anti-aircraft fire and dropped bombs on the outskirts of the city, killing one person and causing slight property damage.

Residents of the Egyptian capital, routed from their beds by air raid alarms which sounded from 2:30 a. m. until 4:30 a. m. with only brief intervals of silence, watched the biggest anti-aircraft display which they have witnessed since the start of the war.

The enemy planes appeared over the city in bright moonlight and encountered five separate attacks from anti-aircraft batteries.

Only a few bombs were dropped on the outskirts.

REACH PORT

800 Refugees From Europe, Middle East on Rescue Ship.

BALTIMORE —(AP)— The 8,000-ton Portugese steamer Nyassa docked here today with nearly 800 refugees from Europe and the Middle East.

Naval intelligence officers said the passengers included a party of about 150 Polish technicians and their families en route to Canada; 38 refugee children from France, and about 160 children from other nations. There were no Americans aboard.

ROBBERS GET $700

80, He's Back In Navy

For 40 years George Sanderson served in the U. S. Navy, retiring after World War 1. Early this year he made a special trip to Washington to get permission to go back into service. Today, Sanderson, chief boatswain's mate, is back, serving with the San Francisco recruiting station. Sanderson is seen at right with fellow officers.

contained four sugar rationing cards and other personal papers.

The second purse stolen was reported by Mrs. Ruth Goad, 154 West Fourth street, an employe of the 36 Bar. Mrs. Goad told police she heard the back door at the establishment open and close and when she returned to the kitchen her pocketbook was gone. It contained $5.15 in cash, her birth certificate and social security card.

A radio valued at $25 was stolen from the Charles Weaver home, 57 East First street, yesterday morning. The thief, Weaver told police, had evidently pushed a wire through a hole in the screen door and unhooked the screen.

Harlon Bridges, a Westinghouse employe, found the left door glass in his automobile broken yesterday afternoon when he went to the plant parking lot for his car. Bridges told police entrance had not been gained.

Meanwhile Mrs. Charles Neal, 466 Springmill street, frightened away a colored intruder by her screams at 12.45 a. m. today. Mrs. Neal awakened in a downstairs bedroom and saw the intruder in the adjoining room. He ran towards Buckingham street, she told police. The man gained entrance to the house by cutting the back door screen and unlatching the door.

RAF BATTERS SAARBRUECKEN

Causes Heavy Damage in Key Rail and Industrial City of Saar Valley.

The Berlin radio said that several other towns in western Germany also were bombed by the British raiders.

It was the second successive night attack on Germany, Hamburg and its big submarine-building yards having been the target the preceding night of a mass attack in which perhaps 600 planes participated.

Hamburg also was attacked Sunday night. Duisburg—important manufacturing center at the junction of the Rhine and Ruhr rivers—had been raided on four of the previous six nights.

Ohioan Says Nazi City Took Beating

RAF BOMBER COMMAND STATION, Eastern England—(U.P.)—Saarbrucken, key German coal center, took "a hell of a walloping" during the night, Pilot William Berry, jr., Bowling Green, O., said as he climbed from a Wellington bombing plane with his Royal Air Force comrades upon their return from their raid on the reich.

"It was just like eating cake," Berry said. "Brother, it was some show. We were cooking with gas all the time."

It was the 16th time Berry had piloted a Wellington in raids against Germany since, after serving in the United States army air corps, he joined the RAF nine months ago.

He took part in the first 1,000-plane raid on Cologne and Monday night's Hamburg blitz.

Between gulps of hot tea in the crew rest room immediately after his return early today, Berry said, grinning:

"The attack on Saarbrucken was just stooging around compared to Hamburg. That, I am telling you, was plenty tough, brother.

"But over Saarbrucken the anti-aircraft fire and the searchlights were nothing much to worry about and we only saw one Jerry fighter. He didn't bother us much, either."

ASKS MORE DATA IN SPY HEARING

Supreme Court 'Leans Over Backwards' to Avoid Axis Brand of Justice.

ing Biddle's argument, remarked that "we recognize the courts are not open to enemy alien plaintiffs but we also recognize that the courts are open to defendants to defend themselves."

Justice Jackson asked several questions as to the application of the Hague conventions respecting the laws of war, to which both the United States and Germany are signatories.

At the same time Jackson wondered audibly, since anyone who saw the men landing "could have shot them and it wouldn't have been murder," at what point did their status change so that they acquired rights.

"After they had entered the community of ordinary human beings in this country," Royall answered.

The defense staff raised other points beside the issue of whether the prisoners could claim civil rights—that the president's order establishing the military commission was invalid and that the commission's conduct of the case was improper, among others.

But the question of the prisoners' rights remained paramount since, if the supreme court found they had none, it would not need to pass upon the other questions.

In case the court went on to these other questions, Biddle argued that the constitution gave the president sweeping powers as the nation's commander-in-chief.

And beyond these powers, Biddle cited the constitutional provision that "the congress shall have power * * * to make rules concerning captures on land and water," and an act of 1798 by which he implied that this power had been delegated to the president.

This law, dealing with the status and treatment of "all natives, citizens, denizens or subjects" of a hostile power who are in the United States in time of war, says that "the president is authorized * * * to direct the conduct to be observed, on the part of the United States, toward the aliens * * *."

Royall contended that the establishment of the military commission trying the men was invalid on the ground that it violated the "articles of war," a congressional enactment. One of these articles provides that the judge advocate general of the army shall review the sentence of a court martial or military commission, whereas the president appointed the judge advocate general to the prosecution and ordered the commission to report direct to the White House. And there were other technical grounds.

Royall held that the proceedings violated the military rights of the prisoners but Biddle contended that the articles of war were prescribed not for their cases but for the trial of American soldiers.

The prisoners were not in court.

ADJOURNS RADIO HEARING AFTER RUBIN TESTIFIES

why he so readily granted loans to help the founders get the station on the air.

Asked why he loaned money to George Satterlee, C. A. Kessel, and John Weimer, the original Richland, Inc., officers, when he scarcely knew them, Rubin said he had previously loaned Weimer money and "when I start helping a fellow, I don't like to leave him up on a bank."

Weimer was on the spot for funds to get the station project going, and if I hadn't helped him, he would have lost all he had invested," Rubin said.

Harris asked him whether he knew it was against FCC regulations for an applicant for a station license to misrepresent his financial responsibility. Rubin replied that he "had no idea" it was wrong to borrow money to get a station started."

"You have had eight or nine years experience in the radio business, and do you mean to say that you didn't know that the FCC wanted to put a stop to the idea of promoting a station license and then shopping around later for the money to operate it?" Harris asked.

"That didn't enter my mind at the time," Rubin said.

Earlier testimony brought out that Rubin loaned the station founders money to give them financial responsibility when the license was applied for and then took his loans back within 90 days, many months before the license was actually granted.

Harris questioned him today about the accuracy of station reports to the FCC, contending that certain stock transactions were not reported as promptly as required.

Rubin said so far as he knew the reports were accurate at the time they were turned in to the FCC. He said he thought it wasn't necessary to report options on stock or actual transfers until after they had taken place.

Harris told him the FCC wanted to know about the status of stock and any attempt to transfer it under option.

Harris charged that Rubin not only helped to finance and build the station, but all the key employes when it went on the air were his former employes elsewhere or were obligated to him.

Rubin replied that that was a mistaken idea, but admitted later that six of the original staff members had worked for him or owed him money.

O. E. Fields, present station manager, was called to the stand briefly this morning to present book records of the station, showing that Rubin had made loans and contributed equipment to the station a number of times since 1938.

On direct questioning yesterday afternoon Ben Fisher, counsel representing the radio station at the hearing, Rubin told how John Weimer, former secretary-treasurer of Richland, Inc., came to him in the summer of 1938 to borrow $3,500 after telling him he wanted to open a station in Mansfield.

Rubin said he granted the loan, taking stock in station WJW, Akron, as security. He testified, however, that he knew nothing of the incorporation proceedings for the station here and did not enter the Mansfield picture again until December, 1938, when he loaned the corporation approximately $16,000 just before the firm applied for a station license in Washington.

He said that in the fall of 1939, after he had invested about $11,000 in the venture, he wanted 50 shares of stock as partial payment since he had "been putting in money and had nothing but receipts to show for it."

About that time he was called to a meeting with Weimer, George Satterlee and C. A. Kessel, then company officials, at Attorney A. E. Bernstein's office in Cleveland to talk over settlement of his claims against the company.

"It seemed to me that all they wanted was my money, so I proposed that they pay me off and I'd be happy," he continued. "Bernstein proposed that the stock be divided 50-50, half to me and the other half to Weimer, Satterlee, and Kessel so there wouldn't be any more arguments. I wouldn't agree to that kind of proposition."

Rubin said earlier that he and the three company officers were having continual disputes over the management of the station and his claims for equipment he had furnished and money he invested in the station.

Testimony brought out that he supervised the construction of the station's broadcaster tower north of the city, the grading of the ground for the transmitter, and the equipping of the station. He also recommended the employment of members of the station staff.

Rubin said he obtained majority control of the station's stock in June, 1940, when his wife also purchased 77 shares of stock from M. W. O'Neil of Akron.

Mrs. Rubin was on the stand briefly yesterday afternoon to testify how she became a stockholder in Richland, Inc.

Following her as a witness was Attorney Bernstein of Cleveland, who for a time was counsel for the firm. He was put on the stand by the FCC.

He said by the time he was employed by the firm, the three officers (Satterlee, Kessel and Weimer) were quarreling with Rubin, so he proposed they divide the stock so each "faction" would have half.

"They agreed to that in my office," he said, but he added that he didn't think they ever carried out the agreement. Rubin testified later that he had never agreed to it.

Berstein staid he understood most of the disputes were over the management of the station and he said officers of the firm told him that "the station manager Rubin hired, didn't know how to run the station and they didn't want to keep her."

VOTES APPROVAL

Westinghouse Employes To Accept 5½ Cent Pay Boost.

Sidney Earhart, president of the CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine workers union local 711 at Westinghouse, reported today that members of the union had voted unanimously to accept a proposed new company-wide wage contract which he said provided a 5½ cents an hour increase for all production workers.

Earhart said approximately 2,000 plant employes here would benefit by the increase, which is retroactive to May 31.

Ratification of the proposal, which climaxes several months of negotiation by company and union officials, took place yesterday at a union meeting at John Simpson Junior high school, Earhart said. The acceptance will be sent to the company today.

United Nations base at Port Moresby on the southeastern shore of the island.

The Japanese continued their raids on Port Moresby and the Australian mainland, but registered no effective results. Three attacks on Port Moresby; each carried out by flight of three heavy bombers, were beaten off by anti-aircraft fire Wednesday night.

Two small bomber formations raided Port Darwin. There were no casualties and only slight damage.

U. S. Fliers Knock Down 3 Jap Planes

CHUNGKING —(INS)— Fliers of the United States army air corps operating in China today shot down three of nine Japanese bombers which attempted a raid on the Allied airdrome at Hengyang, Hunan province.

A communique issued from headquarters of the United States army said that Major John Allison shot down two of the enemy craft and Captain Albert J. Baumler accounted for the third.

None of the intercepting American planes was lost.

Bombs dropped from the Japanese planes caused light damage, the communique said.

Stronger Drive On Jap Invaders Hinted

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— Unification of command of American forces in the Aleutian islands area was interpreted in some quarters today to be the first step in more determined efforts to drive the Japanese from their footholds there.

The action, announced by the Navy department yesterday, followed agitation for such a move in and out of congress. It also comes after many congressional demands that drastic action be taken to eliminate the threat to the Alaskan mainland in that area.

The navy did not announce the details of the new command. Nor did it reveal the name of the naval officer to whom is entrusted the responsibility for the joint operations of the army, navy and air force.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, THURSDAY, JULY 30, 1942.

A narrow mind is quickly made up.

The only people who don't appreciate suggestions are the ones who might profit most from them.

Unheard remark: "Well, I see that coffee is getting scarce, so we'd better not use so much, or other people won't get their share."

Research discloses that no less than 350 common plants contain rubber—and in the old days each would have opened the way for a promoter to put on a stock-selling campaign.

Retail Merchants Pledge Support

ACTION by the Mansfield Retail Merchants association in voting whole-hearted support of the newly created war industry board is in accord with the consistently maintained attitude of that organization in all matters designed to advance the interests of this community.

It is noted that the retail merchants, in resolutions adopted yesterday, not only endorse the purposes of the war industry board and extend "best wishes for its success," but also "accept responsibility to participate in a material way" in supporting the board's activities.

This last is highly important, for no such board, however capable and earnest its members may be, can accomplish much without the interested and active co-operation of many other individuals and organization groups.

It is upon the retail merchants of a city that first call is made for support of all projects intended for community maintenance, growth and betterment, and it is also the retail trade of a city that is quickest to reflect an upward or downward trend in local conditions.

Always, in considering ways to contribute to the welfare of a city, it is important to recognize the large part which retail stores play in marking the difference between a live, modern, progressive city and one which shows evidence of stagnation.

In the present objective to benefit Mansfield by co-operation along every possible line, the mutual advantages to be derived from consistent patronage of Mansfield retail merchants can scarcely be overemphasized, as it is this patronage upon which they must depend to broaden their field of opportunity to support local enterprises of all kinds.

Mansfield is fortunate in its high percentage of progressive, forward-looking retail merchants, and in their unfailing willingness to respond to all community calls made upon them.

Pre-Pearl Harbor Records Scanned

AN INTERESTING thing this year about an otherwise rather dull campaign is the covering-up process as applied to the records of senators, representatives and others in public life who were wrong before Dec. 7. The Washington scene is naturally the most obvious, because that is where governmental power is centered and because Washington, ever since the present world war started, has been the greatest listening post in the world.

The law-makers who fought American preparedness and denounced foresighted men as "warmongers" right up to the assault at Pearl Harbor are naturally busy now demonstrating their patriotic zeal and comprehension. But they do not go unscathed. Voters, even while granting their good faith, question their intelligence. People persist in asking such embarrassing questions as, if they did not understand the world situation and the American peril before, how can the public be sure they understand it now?

This is a time when, more than any other time in American history, public men need to know what is going on in the world and where American interests lie.

Sad Plight of Small Factories

PHILIP D. REED, of the War Production Board, recently stated that about 24,000 small manufacturing concerns in this country would have to shut down before October. A lot of them are already closed or closing.

These, as Mr. Reed explained, are industries that find it difficult or impossible to contribute to the war materials program as at present constituted. Nobody seems particularly to blame, but it is a serious situation. A corporation for the help of "the smaller war plants" set up by congress, through the War Production Board, can help small manufacturers and business men only to a limited extent.

These, it should be understood, are not "lame duck industries" in the ordinary sense. They are in trouble from no fault of their own. They are war victims. Some of them, no doubt, could still be used for war production of some kind. Many of them, as Congressman Patman of Texas has said, can be saved from present disaster, and for future usefulness, by an opportunity to borrow money at reasonable rates on their frozen inventories. They will be ready to resume work when the war is over. The country will then need their production, for there will be an immense amount of reconstruction and replacement to handle.

Anti-Freeze Need Anticipated

WASHINGTON reports that "anti-freeze solutions are now frozen" by the Office of Price Administration. But it needn't be assumed that the anti-freeze mixture is thereby failing in its purpose. The precious liquid will be sold next winter at a retail price of not more than $2.65 a gallon or 70 cents a quart. This is for the "permanent" or non-evaporating solution. The non-permanent, as usual, will cost less.

Such an announcement may be of special interest now because it assumes that private cars will still be running next winter.

Versatile Baseball Player

A ONE-MAN baseball team is the latest. Mike Ryba of the Boston Red Sox is a pitcher by trade, used mostly for relief work. The other day, when the Sox were short a catcher, Mike went behind the bat and did well. This completed the round for him. He has now played every position on the team, and performed acceptably in all. His specialty used to be second base, but now it is every position. While still a minor leaguer, he filled every place on the ball club, including the duties of trainer, traveling secretary and bus driver.

With such talents Mike ought to be sure of some kind of baseball job as long as he can totter.

WHISTLING PAST THE GRAVEYARD

Little Known As to War's Trend

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—"Russians are retreating stubbornly," said a Moscow dispatch the other day, bringing news of the campaign on the Caucasus front.

"Chinese have successfully evacuated positions in Chekiang province," related a message from Chungking, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's capital.

"Germans advance with enormous losses," came a British report awhile ago from North Africa. That was farther back than the other two. The Nazis are pretty stationary in that area at present. However, the official version had to discount their progress somehow, as long as they continued to be making more or less of it.

That's how these war stories are relayed to us.

I've no doubt the same kind of guff is dished out to the Berlin press and to Rome's and Tokyo's.

The idea's to sustain national morale, on whichever side it requires sustenance. The only trouble with it is that it reciprocally is so meaningless. Retreating stubbornly! But retreating. Evacuating positions successfully! But evacuating 'em. Enormous losses! But an advance accompanying 'em.

The fact is that heaven alone knows how the war's developing.

No. Maybe, besides heaven, the actual fighters know. But the conflicting countries' various respective civilian publics don't.

U. S. Public Up In Air.

The American public doesn't, anyway. European and Asiatic publics probably have quite an inkling. They're on short rations already. Think of Germany—without beer! Think of England—with only one cup of tea per person!

It's starting to hit us, too, though.

I guess I don't realize it, not being an automobilist. Rubber and gas are immaterial to me.

Yet there are forms of food that I'm addicted to, and will I be able to keep on getting 'em? My wearing apparel is almost worn out also. Will there be more available? And fuel, as the weather cools off? What'll it cost—I'd like to know. It would pay me to do my buying now in anticipation of a price hike, but it's an identical rule that applies to EVERYTHING—my prospective overcoat, my winter underwear, my wife's stuff. Fortunately I'm too old to have babies, but I've got grandchildren.

And those grandchildren I've got to contribute to in Mexico City—in the United States diplomatic service.

I'm stung all around—so to speak, Pan-Americanly.

Well, what I'm saying is that we don't know what we've got coming. Even the autoists don't sense it.

I was over in England during the last world war. It was hades. You came pretty close to being hungry. At best you were uncomfortable. Here it wasn't so bad, but we didn't take that war seriously. This session we exaggerate, if anything. We've got that air raid complex included.

Bleak Outlook.

What gives me a pain is the prospect that we'll lick the Axis and then be in an economic hole that we won't get out of in a couple of generations. I don't care whether or not Europe gets out of it. That's not our funeral. I do care mildly for China, just as a matter of sympathy.

Price Fixer Leon Henderson's stunt is to head off a world skwush of the kind I've been discussing, economically. But I don't know whether or not Leon can do it.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Sunday, July 30, 1922.

It was estimated that Mansfielders had more than a million dollars invested in diamonds.

Daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Danels, 139 North Mulberry street.

Pola Negri in "Gypsy Blood" was screen attraction at the Majestic.

It was noted that Charles W. Fuchs, assistant cashier of Citizens bank, was developing ability as a window trimmer.

C. M. Crafton, manager of the J. C. Penney store, left on trip to New York.

Mrs. Henry Pittman, former Mansfield resident, died at home of daughter in Toledo.

Walter E. Hartwig returned to position on Miami, Fla., Herald after two months visit here.

TODAY IN HISTORY

This date in 1619 marked the meeting of the first colonial legislative assembly in a log church at Jamestown, Va. This little group of twenty-two "burgesses" became the first representative assembly in America. After a few days' session in which land claims were settled and laws passed for the punishment of idleness, gambling, drunkenness and Sabbath breaking the groups adjourned.

Listen World!

A Letter to F. D. R.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I make no apology for writing to you in this informal manner. I am one of the common citizens who voted for you three times, for I believe that most of your notions are soundly American and deeply necessary.

But I do think there's one thing you should straighten out—and quick. And that's this rubber problem. I don't know what's causing it and I doubt if you do. But unless you've "lost the common touch," you must know it is raising more Cain with American morale than any other factor in our war.

We Americans, as you must have observed, are a peculiar people. We'll stand any amount of abstract abuse and graft. We're used to being shoved around by remote control. But let some small personal abuse come along and we blow our tops. And this rubber wrangle is the sort of thing that gets us where we live, and is slowing up our war willingness more than any other problem.

IS OR ISN'T THERE AN ACTUAL RUBBER SHORTAGE?

We'd like to know. One day we're informed in full-page ads that synthetic rubber can be successfully made from gasoline, alcohol, cup custard or old corset stays, and are given the names of the firms to whom the contracts for making the same are allotted.

So I send my last girdle and what happens? Is a pound of synthetic rubber released? Do I hear any victorious yells from Egypt or Alaska when my former waist-line rolls into action? It is not and I do not. The matter—and my girdle—stay just where they were when the first yelp started. Yet daily I am assured that there is enough wheat stored in our bulging warehouses to make tires and tanks for ten years to come. Then why in heck didn't somebody tell me that before I let my waist-line go?

Nor am I the only victim. A friend of mine, succumbing to the strains of "I Love America," gave up her rubber bath mat. Today she has three broken ribs and has lost her job. Now I ask you, Mr. President, does that make sense?

Reverting to one more personal incident, there is the case history of my bathtub plug. I have been urged, pleaded with and practically commanded to relinquish this article but I still refuse to do so. I like that bathtub plug. We have been together for years.

Moreover, neither my associates nor yours truly dare contemplate the horrors of a bathless Me for the endurance. I admit there are people who never take baths, and I smell them. If that be liberty, me for the jungle. So I'm keeping my bathtub plug, and if this be treason, bring on your shotgun squad.

Am I kidding? Am I making light of a grave American necessity? No, I'm not, Mr. President. I'm simply trying to show you, as a friendly voter, the confusion, resentment and rising indifference which this sort of lollygagging is creating in the American mind. And I should know. Hundreds of fan letters pile my desk daily. They also would like to know. The writers of those letters are as patriotic as any who have ever inhabited these shores, but they are getting fed up. This seemingly small issue is taking precedent over every other war demand.

THEY ARE WILLING TO SACRIFICE — AND PLENTY. BUT THEY DON'T WANT TO BE PLAYED FOR SUCKERS. THEY MAY BE DUMB IN MANY WAYS BUT THEY KNOW, WITHOUT A B. A. DEGREE, WHEN SOMEONE'S STACKING THE DECK. AND IF THEY ARE BEING TAKEN FOR A RIDE IN THIS MATTER OF RUBBER, HOW ABOUT ALL THE OTHER ISSUES?

Mr. President, America wants to know. It has stood for all these billions of taxes, all these compulsory sacrifices, the loss of its boys, the empty homes. But it's rapidly nearing the same dangerous peak which it reached when it dumped the tea in Boston Harbor. Somebody's got to put up or shut up. The U. S. A. wants the answers. How about a fireside talk that will give us the lowdown?

Sincerely yours,
ELSIE ROBINSON, Voter.

Nazi Conquest of Russia Depends On Speedy Addition to Resources

—By DE WITT MACKENZIE

WE KNOW that if Hitler can smash the Russian army and make conquest of the Caucasus and Middle East during the few remaining weeks of good fighting weather, he will have acquired resources and strategical advantages which will give him a tremendous, and perhaps unconquerable, strength as over-lord of Europe.

We know, too, that if the Russians can muster the strength to halt the invaders where they now are, we shall have the fuehrer as neatly on the toasting fork as the devil can hope to get him in the long run.

But what happens if the Nazi leader is only partially successful? Where will he stand, for instance, if he succeeds in cutting Russia proper off from the Caucasian oil and other resources, and its life-line to the Persian gulf, but fails to secure those resources for himself?

Things might turn out that way. The mighty striking power being shown by the Germans may enable them at least to throw a barrier across the mouth of the Caucasus.

However, it's one thing for Hitler to establish such a barrier, and it's quite another for him to fight his way down the Caucasian isthmus to Aladdin's lamp. Soon the great, level plain of the northern Caucasus will give way to the mighty mountain range which reaches across the Black sea to the Caspian. There are routes along the coast, but they are narrow and it's hard to believe that the Reds couldn't defend them.

So let's say the Nazi chief has established this barrier but is himself blocked from fresh resources. What then?

Viewing the question through the eyes of experts who have analyzed all aspects of the situation, we can say that Hitler's strength will deteriorate while that of the Allies increases. This is so because the war already has run two years longer than Hitler expected, and he is getting to the bottom of the huge supplies which he piled up over several years in preparation for war. There is no way of replenishing those supplies unless he can break through to the outside world for them.

BRITISH-AMERICAN agricultural experts in London say the Germans this winter will face the most serious food situation they have experienced since the war started.

Not only are food supplies terribly low, but there has been widespread destruction of the means of replenishing them. Germany is better off than most, because she has plundered the conquered countries, but the lean cows have devoured the fat and the seven years of plenty are gone.

Even worse, from Hitler's standpoint, is his need of oil. He must have that not only for his fighting machines but to keep his war industries going. And other supplies are needed.

All this gives point to the warning issued to the German people by British Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris that British and American bombers were ready to devastate the reich, city by city.

Hitler can't compete with such air power without fresh resources. And he must be equipped for the land invasion which will come one of these days.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—It's going to take a heap of whip-cracking to keep congress in session until after the November elections.

It may not be an "official vacation" as Senate Majority Leader Barkley hopes, but absentees will simply force the two houses to postpone important business.

The reason is, of course, the elections. The primaries in about two-thirds of the states are yet to be held. They will not be cleaned up until late September. That's going to leave only about six weeks for the general election campaigning. And just try to keep a congressman away from the hustings back home when he thinks his job is endangered.

THERE are indications daily now that the exodus is already on. The senate roll calls are tedious affairs. The clerks have to call over and over the names of the absentees, hoping that a few more will answer to their names and provide the necessary 49 for business to continue.

When the supplemental defense bill came to a vote recently in the senate, the quorum couldn't be obtained and the vote had to go over for a day—a contingency that probably hasn't arisen since the defense effort started. On that day, a check-up revealed that 37 senators were out of the city.

As with the senate, so with the house—perhaps even more so, because all of the house members are up for re-election. However, most of the representatives did stick around until they had cleared the tax bill. To miss a vote on a tax bill is not considered the best legislative ethics or political good sense.

Few of the congressmen now sitting have ever had to face the problem of a continuing congress during election years and campaign problems. Even in World war I, congress had its vacation.

The record isn't clear, but it is likely the present congress already has broken all records for continued sittings.

THE desire to get back to the hustings goes a good deal deeper than any mere love for a political ruckus and making speeches. And it has nothing to do with "vacationing." It is simply that it is a known fact, proved over and over again, that the best way for a congressman to commit political suicide is to stay away from home too long. The folks forget the man that's in. And some young up-and-comer makes a lot of noise and steals the votes.

There is one factor, however, that has made the congressmen a little less frantic to get back to the wars and the home front. In spite of a belief expressed by many that congress might see its greatest turnover this year, indications in the primaries that have been held are that no more "ins" will be out this year than usual.

That consoling fact doesn't eliminate the necessity for getting back for some campaigning, however. It's likely that in spite of the protest of Minority Leader McNary (indicating the Republicans will oppose any prolonged adjournment) that something will be worked out to make the absentee's absence officially excusable.

Timely Editorial

Will Rogers' Line.

Will Rogers' famous prelude might well be reiterated by millions of persons now. The humorist invariably began with, "All I know is what I read in the newspapers." More conversations should begin that way and continue along that line. If you get a wild tale about unheard of conditions in army camps, about disaster, or of the grave instability of our allies, just stop and reflect on whether you ever saw a hint of this in a newspaper. If you did not, then be mindful of the fact that you probably have picked up some enemy propaganda.

Don't repeat it.—Toledo Blade.

Man About Manhattan

Some Ups and Downs

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK— Maurice Costello was a great matinee idol in his day, and a challenging personality on Broadway. The father of the Costello sisters and father-in-law of the late John Barrymore believed in himself to such an extent that he fought bitter battles with producers and eventually became the first star to see his name in lights ABOVE the title of the play . . I mention this because Costello may be seen currently in a picture called "They All Kissed the Bride," . . . But you'll have to pick him out yourself . . . No credit is given him whatever. His name isn't even mentioned in the billing . . . Time marches on!

WHEN the summer season got underway at the beaches and resorts hereabouts it was learned that only about 25 per cent of the people who formerly leased concessions had cared to risk their money against the dual drawbacks of war and nightly dimouts. But those at Coney Island who took the risk are now making money hand over fist. The warm weather has driven the people to the beaches, and the few on hand to offer refreshments and drinks are striking bonanzas. They're doing twice as much business as formerly.

There remains no way, apparently, to account for the whim that turns successes into failures and failures into brilliant comebacks. Seven years ago when the Theater Guild produced George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" it was a costly and disheartening failure. The cast was fine and the music was lovely, but it ran for only a brief while and the producers swallowed a distressing financial loss.

Seven years later Cheryl Crawford, who admired the work tremendously, brought "Porgy" back to Broadway, and the other night it passed its 200th performance, a solid financial success. The scenes are identical, the cast is largely the same . . . It's the same story and the same tunes . . . The only difference this time is that people have flocked to see it in droves. . . . In 1935 they remained away in hordes. I haven't seen a single soul who can explain why.

HERE'S a curious item that fits the present day behind-the-scenes intrigue. Phyllis Sage is a young woman who earns her living by reading the lines in people's hands. You can find her in the "23" room at the George Washington, if you're interested. This is her story:

One night last year, in a Detroit club, a guest held out his hand to be read. Miss Sage suggested that the lines in this man's hand pointed to a fanatical belief in an idea that was doomed to failure. "You're going to lose," she told him.

The man, according to Miss Sage, snapped her up at this intelligence. He seemed in very bad humor. Shortly thereafter he arose and left the room. The other day she saw his picture in the papers. He was G. Wilhelm Kunze, a Nazi bund leader, arrested in Mexico and extradited to this country, to stand trial with other bund personnel who have been gobbled up by Mr. Hoover and his G-men.

A Farmer's Diary

Not 'By Bread Alone'

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

ALL DURING the afternoon, when the horses stopped to rest, I rested my eyes by following the dark green tops of the forested hills. Seated on the cultivator, unprotected from the heat of the sun, I remembered the coolness of secluded woodland nooks, the trickle of cold water that creeps down a neighboring gully, I listened to the cawing of crows from their perch on the chestnut snags, and heard the quarrelsome jays scream loudly. Just southward across the valley, laughter and shouts from the nearest neighbors' children, gave a human accent to the quiet scene.

I listened to the summer breeze blow through the massive oak and elms and saw the leaves turn upward their lighter side. The heavy sweetness of milkweed bloom came from the broad fencerow. I looked at the peach orchard, on the slope, half hidden by tall mulleins and brambles, and urgently hoped for the day when I could use my old worn scythe and spade to redeem the trees from this tangle.

Jogging the horses down the cucumber rows, I heard in a neighbor's field the rhythmic movement of the mower and saw the crumbling swath of meadow grass slump behind the cutterbar in deep low ridges. The cattle will have new, tender pickings, now.

When the work was done and I drove the horses home, the sunset was in the sky. Long white clouds floated above the ridge in a sea of yellow gold. At equal distance from each side, the lowering sun formed from falling mist, the rainbow tints of tiny sundogs. I watched it glow and fade through all the shades of rose and flame and violet.

Plodding down a country road behind a tired, sweaty team, at evening, might seem a strange time to be glad for the beauty of nature.

But I looked back over my day, from the early hour when I waded the deep gray coolness of the garden and bathed my hands and face in cool fresh dew, to the sunset glory above the hills as I took home the team—and I knew that the farmers who till the land need not live by bread alone, for nowhere in the world is there more interest or invention or science or beauty going to waste than on the farm.

COURT NEWS IN ASHLAND COUNTY

ASHLAND — Construction of the will of H. S. Scott is asked in a suit brought in Ashland common pleas court by his executors, Robert S. Scott and E. D. Norris, against Minnie L. Scott and others. The will of Scott, who died June 19, 1940, provides that rents and income not needed by his widow, Minnie L. Scott, be divided equally among his children at the end of each year. The widow elected to take her portion under the law rather than under the will and the executors ask the court to determine proportion of income to which the widow is entitled; whether a stepdaughter is entitled to share with other children; and whether a grandson, Charles L. Shank, is entitled to his mother's share.

Suit of the France Stone company against E. A. and V. J. Bryan has been continued in common pleas court until further court order because the latter defendant is in the United States army.

Temporary alimony of $7.50 per week has been ordered paid by the defendant in the divorce suit of Bonnie Brown vs. James Robert Brown.

The following suits have been settled and dismissed in common pleas court: C. S. Garretson Lumber company vs. George R. Gault; George R. Gault vs. C. S. Garretson Lumber company; Bessie E. Jacques vs. George Duffy and Bessie E. Jacques vs. John G. Duffy.

Suit for divorce has been filed in common pleas court by Richard Beard against Maxine Beard on grounds of gross neglect and extreme cruelty. The plaintiff asks custody of two children.

During the evening the club reorganized and elected the following officers: Mrs. Raymond Lewis, president; Mrs. Robert Gers, secretary, and Mrs. Morehead, treasurer. The name of the club was changed to Emanon. Mrs. Arthur Vaughn was received as a new member, and Mrs. C. A. Cowgill was the retiring president. Following the business session pinochle and euchre were played with high score awards won respectively by Mrs. Harold Curren, Mrs. Vaughn, Mrs. Wilbur McCune, and Mrs. Otto Koch. For the next meeting, Aug. 25, Mrs. Cowgill and Mrs. Gers will be hostesses.

CHARGES FILED AGAINST LAWYER FOR DISBARMENT

Crestline Attorney Cited In Probe Ordered By Crawford County Court.

BUCYRUS — W. J. Schwenck, J. W. Wright and C. V. Vollrath, Bucyrus attorneys who were named recently by Judge Clarence U. Ahl to investigate complaints against Attorney Edward C. King of Crestline, target of disbarment proceedings, late Wednesday filed three specific charges against King for consideration of the court.

The charges were:

1. That on November 6, 1940, King was employed by Esther Marie Krofta to handle a divorce case for her and that she allegedly paid him $65—$15 for court costs and $50 for his fee. It is alleged that he did not represent her in any way but that he still holds the $65.

2. Myrtle Halbert of Galion is alleged to have employed King on Feb. 25, 1940, to bring a suit against H. G. Kimes in Justice Charles Monroe's court in Galion, for which King allegedly was given $7.50, but never filed the case and did not refund the money.

3. As attorney for Frank Riedel, executor of the estate of Samantha A. Riedel, in probate court in Richland county, King, in October, 1939, allegedly unlawfully withdrew $340 of the estate's funds and put money to his own use and was cited by probate court in Richland county. It is further alleged that King's mother paid the estate the amount he unlawfully had used.

GIVES LECTURE

Speaker Tells of Founding of Ashland Red Cross.

ASHLAND—In a lecture on the "History of the Red Cross in Ashland County" for staff assistants of the Red Cross, Charles Campbell related that Red Cross work first began in Ashland county in 1904 through the efforts of the late J. L. Clark and that the county chapter was organized in 1917.

Only one paid worker is maintained by the local chapter and all other work is carried out by part-time volunteers.

Campbell's lecture was the first of a series of nine which when completed will qualify persons who have volunteered service in office and clerical work for staff assistants' certificates. The lectures will cover a history of the Red Cross and a study of its organization.

Lowe Brothers STANDARD BARN PAINT

There's a four-way saving for you in LOWE BROTHERS STANDARD BARN PAINT:

1. It covers solidly more area per gallon than "cheap" barn paint, so less paint is needed.
2. Protects your buildings longer by lasting longer.
3. Spreads easier, saves labor.
4. Holds its color—eliminates frequent repainting.

In addition, there's an extra saving at this featured price.

FARMER INVENTS FIVE-MAN SUB

ATLANTA, Ga. — (INS) — R. M. Williams, a 61-year-old farmer-inventor, is completing plans for a 5-man, 80-foot submarine which he says will be twice as fast as any in existence and a lot safer.

Williams made his first plans in 1917, and they were being considered by the government at the end of the World war. He destroyed his plans and models after the armistice.

AIDS OFFICERS

Red Cross Staff Assistants To Assist Executives.

The Red Cross Staff Assistance corps rallied its forces this week to do a full time job at the Red Cross headquarters in order to free executives from some of the routine procedure.

Two receptionists will be furnished daily, one for the home service director, Miss Esther Barnett, and the other for the general offices.

Most of the volunteers will work half days and at present the schedule calls for 18 workers a week. Mrs. William A. Layton, staff assistance chairman, is in charge of supplying the workers.

Three Ships Sunk Under Him, Gob Seeks Black Cat

NEW ORLEANS —(INS)— Gale McGrath, ordinary seaman, isn't sure whether Number 13 is lucky or unlucky.

In a series of coincidences that would be unbelievable in fiction, McGrath has been on three ships at sea when they were torpedoed.

Each time the torpedoing occurred at midnight on the 11th of the month—Feb. 11, March 11, and April 11, all of this year.

Each time he has taken to the lifeboats and survived, although 31 of his 38 crewmates were killed in the first torpedoing.

And each time his station number was 13!

McGrath, a Columbus, O., native who now lives in New Orleans with his mother and his two daughters, can't figure out whether that "13" brought him bad luck, so that he was torpedoed; or good luck, so that he survived.

Returning to New Orleans after the last torpedoing, McGrath said he was ready to sign on for another voyage as soon as he could find a black cat for a mascot.

HAS SHELTER

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — (U.P.) — Henry W. Longfellow's colonial home has a "natural" 183-year-old air raid shelter which originally was used as a fireproof vault for the famous poet's manuscripts.

His grandson, Henry W. Longfellow Dana, who now owns the square clapboarded mansion, says the vault is ideal for a shelter, although it has not been outfitted yet.

"I am not sure what would be needed," he said, "but we certainly will have plenty to read."

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

If you have an excess of acids in your blood; your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be overworked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of excess acids and poisonous waste.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Kidneys may need help the same as bowels, so ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

WORK PROGRAM ARRANGED FOR 12,000 JUNIOR RED CROSSERS

Richland county's 12,000 Junior Red Cross members will be called upon to use the manual and home economics training departments of their respective schools next fall to turn out items for recreation rooms and hospitals occupied by the armed forces.

The tentative program for the organization was completed yesterday by Mrs. William J. Bishop, county Junior Red Cross chairman, and it will be introduced to the Juniors as soon as school starts.

Among the items recommended for production by the boys in the county were ping pong tables, checker boards, jigsaw puzzles, lapboards and practice Morse code keyboards while suggested articles for the girls included bedside slippers and bags, ditty bags and pajamas.

Materials for the bulk of the program will be purchased by the Junior organization from funds received from membership fees and sales tax stamps. The remainder will come from the scraps at the Production Center.

CLASS MEETS

GALION—Mrs. Elizabeth Pensinger was chairman for the evening picnic held at Heise park Wednesday when the Willing Workers of St. Joseph's church met. Twenty-four members were present and after the supper pinochle and bridge were the diversion. The next regular meeting of the group will be held Aug. 12.

SURPRISE DINNER HELD FOR JOAN E. BALLIETT

Bride-Elect of Truman Clark Honored By Betty Dill at Shower; Wedding to Be Solemnized August 8.

A SURPRISE DINNER and miscellaneous shower were held last evening in honor of Miss Joan Balliett, bride-elect of Truman B. Clark. Hostess was Miss Betty Dill of Lexington, who presented the honoree with a lovely gift of china.

Bridge and hearts were the diversions of the evening with prizes being awarded to the Misses Bertha Jessen and Virginia Rupp, who in turn gave them to Miss Balliett. Two little girls, Sue Dill and Joy Bahr, carried the gifts into the living room and presented them to the honoree.

The house was decorated with garden flowers and an arrangement of snapdragons formed the centerpiece. On recent announcements, Miss Balliett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack R Balliett, 173 Euclid avenue, disclosed the date of her marriage to Mr. Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs I. W. Clark, 127 Park avenue west. The couple will exchange vows Aug 8 in the Park Avenue Baptist church at 4 p. m.

Select Cooking Utensils by the Size of Family

Check your present supply of porcelain enameled utensils with relation to the size of your family.

Utensils for the average family of four, for instance, should include sauce pans in 1, 2, and 3-quart sizes, a 4-quart covered kettle, 14-quart dishpan and such other items as a 5-quart teakettle, 15-inch open roasting or bake pan, 1½-quart double boiler, 10-inch pie plate, and a 1½-quart coffee maker.

To make preparation of meals easier, additional utensils sometimes are desirable, though not absolutely essential. Another larger covered pot, 1 and 3-quart pudding pans, and a Dutch oven are convenient and have many uses in the kitchen To insure the freshness of fruits and vegetables, refrigerator storage dishes in various sizes are helpful Soup ladles, basting spoons, a triangular sink drainer, mixing bowls a covered roaster, and various other utensils which are not used every day also contribute to the completely equipped kitchen.

Children May Be Harmed By Teasing

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

Bill is 12. He has curly red hair. Other children at school tease him about his hair. The chances are that some neighbor, or aunt, or other relative, at some time dropped a remark which made the boy think curly, red hair was not the thing for boys to have. Some member of the family may, indeed, have teased the owner of the ruddy curls.

Many a child is made to suffer on account of some physical trait, particularly the adolescent child. He may have freckles, be very fat or very skinny, very tall or very short. He may have a scar on his face caused by an injury, or it may be a birthmark. No matter what the physical trait in which he is different from the average child, he has been reminded of being different. The home folk may have been the first offenders. Perhaps they nicknamed him "Half-pint" of "Skinny" or "Fat," constantly reminding him of the way he differed from other children, constantly associating in his mind the ridicule of his friends.

Nicknames.

Children may get nicknames which they at first dislike, which come to them more or less by accident of some experience or remark. Such nicknames are usually less annoying to children than those which describe some unusual physical trait.

As a rule we can do much to help our children to accept these new names in good fun and, indeed, to welcome them as signs of being a good fellow, of standing in well with the group. You and I know persons who capitalize on a nickname or irregular physical trait. They accept it as a mark of individuality. Their friends, therefore, do also.

Nicknames or no nicknames, we have difficulty in managing ourselves, our adult relatives, neighbors and friends. They will say stupid things right before our children; "Too bad Rebecca has so many freckles." "Jim's so tall and awkward." "Isn't Phil a little shrimp!" Remarks like these by grown-ups, who otherwise may be sensible, do all sorts of damage.

Let us do all we can to keep our children from thinking about the unwelcome traits which they cannot change. Once they become over-sensitive about matters of this sort, let us do our best to help them rise above these real or fancied handicaps, even to capitalize on them.

You may have a list of books on problems by writing me at 235 E. mental health and personality 45th St., New York City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Q. Would you advise a girl in college, or having finished college, to enter nurse's training?

A. Yes; if she has good health and wishes to enter a rich field of service. Her college education won't be lost by any means. She'll have more to give to nursing and more to get from it. If the war were to end tomorrow thousands of nurses will be needed in the armed services of the United States for many more years, and in various parts of the world. Besides, a nurse's training is excellent for motherhood.

HOROSCOPE

For Friday, July 31.

A surprising, almost bewildering, state of affairs, is read from a chain of astral figures. New, sudden, almost revolutionary conditions may arise, promising to catapult the ambitious, ardent, audacious, original and progressive into high planes of prestige, popularity and good fortune, affecting the personal, business and public life. All the energies, forces and faculties may be keyed to concert pitch in the performance of some unusual and productive task of value and benefit to self and the community.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may stand at the door of a year of remarkable opportunities for progress, adventure and noteworthy achievement. Mental, nervous, creative and technical stimuli should be high-pressured for this grand stroke of genius.

A child born on this day should be richly endowed with creative ability. It may rise to extraordinary achievements, if not carried away by subtle weaknesses.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"I'm sure he won't think you have broken your promise," I reassured Mary. "He knows that I know of your trips to that restaurant with Stephen and Olina. The secret he's guarding from me is what information he wishes you to get from Stephen. He no doubt will tell me that in good time, but you know Father."

"Do I ever?" Mary ejaculated. "No clam or oyster ever had anything on Grandpa Spencer. They open up when put over hot water, but I don't think a barbecue would have any effect on him. I'm mighty glad I haven't put my foot too far into the trough. But please, darling, if you love me, make your interview snappy. I shall be on pins and needles until I know what his verdict is."

"Even if he approves, I am not sure I can bring myself to go," I warned her, and the image of her swiftly crestfallen face stayed vividly before me while I talked to my father.

Tells Spencer.

"Mary is in the other suite," I told him, "and she brings me a curious tale which I think you ought to know."

His eyebrows drew together into frowning disapproval.

"Does it concern the mission she is performing for me?" he asked.

"No, indeed," I said, then repeated Mary's tattle of the queer old man at the restaurant, and her request that I go down with herself, Olina and Redfield, and inspect the mysterious stranger.

My father listened quietly, intensely interested. When I finished, he put the very question which had lurked in the back of my own mind.

"Has Olina connected the appearance of this old man with that queer fan letter she received?"

"Mary didn't say so," I replied, "and I am sure she wouldn't miss a point like that. Did the writer of that letter ever insert the newspaper personal he said he would?"

To my surprise, my father took this leading question without any show of annoyance.

"Not to my knowledge," he said. "I never have seen it." Then he came across to me, and put his hand on my shoulder.

"I know how you feel about leaving the hotel at night, because of the children, Margaret," he said. "Therefore, I am not asking you to go with Mary tonight."

"But you would like me to go?" I asked.

"I won't put it that strongly," he said. "But I think it might be a good thing if you did get a look at this old man, seeing him from a more mature viewpoint than that of the two girls. Redfield's reaction doesn't count one way or the other."

"May I let you know my decision in ten minutes?" I asked.

"Of course," he said.

Then I went back into the other suite, where Mary was describing figure eights in a twisting march around the room.

Tells Mary She'll Go.

"I'm going to compromise with my conscience and with you," I said. "I'm going to telephone the farm, and if everything is all right there, I will go with you and Olina tonight."

"Praise be to Allah and all his prophets," she intoned, as I walked to the telephone. But before I could take down the receiver, she made a slight but imperative gesture.

"Just a sec," she said. "Is it permitted that the humblest of your servants approach you with a suggestion?"

CHINESE YOUTH BUYS WAR BONDS

BOSTON —(INS)— Tommy Hor, nine-year-old Chinese schoolboy, knows what war is. He was born in Canton, China, and has seen his native land bombed.

It is perhaps this fact that has prompted the boy to go to work in a laundry after school hours so that he may buy war bonds.

By exchanging every penny he has earned in this manner, Tommy now owns seven bonds of $25 denomination.

Service Men Want Cheer In Letters

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"How can I help?" is a question that turns up daily in my mail, from women who have husbands, sweethearts and brothers in the service.

Well, my dears, you can help enormously by not writing letters that editors call "gloomsters." If you can't build up, don't tear down.

These men are not only fighting for their country, but for you, me, everyone in this beautiful land of ours. They are risking their lives in submarines, bombers and tanks in ways undreamed of in even the last World war. Why add an extra wail in your letters from home?

These gloom bulletins would have seemed unbelievable if letters from soldiers hadn't told how hard to bear are home complaints of situations which they are unable to rectify.

Here's an extract: "I know mother has a devil of a time getting on, what with father's drinking up every cent he makes, and my sister never able to keep a job because she's silly and thinks every man in love with her. But why waste stamps telling me about the family troubles which I know only too well"

Much of the complaining which had to do with a lack of money at home will doubtless be rectified by the time this is in print. Selectees who gave up well-paying jobs for a private's pay of $21.00 a month will doubtless have had their pay stepped up to $42.00, and higher pay schedules will be in effect accordingly. Do what he could, the buck private is no worker of miracles; he just couldn't make that $21.00 a month increase and multiply.

Letters from "back home" are the life line to men in the service. Things which would seem utterly trivial, not worth noticing to the selectee when he's within earshot of his accustomed haunts, are heartening to think over when he's far away. Be amusing and gossipy. Tell him how you missed him on Sunday, when you had his favorite dessert for dinner. Tell him that his old dog, if he had one, listens for his foot-steps.

If he's married and head of the family, tell him how the children talk of him lovingly and await his return.

If he's single, tell him how the girls ask after him. Don't tell him how they're going out with other fellows. Send him the local paper; every word will seem precious when he's far away. Send him encouraging clippings.

Little gifts would be appreciated—boxes of homemade goodies, or even store goodies. Send him all the cheer you can put in a letter.

"The Authority on Authorities"

SHORTEN THE RUN

Next best thing to having the opponents' suit stopped at No Trumps is to hold enough cards of it to shorten their length, so they are unable to run too many tricks in it. Even if they are able to take every trick in the suit, they cannot prevent a No Trump game unless the suit is longer than four cards in one of their hands of the other, or they can pick up another trick in some other suit.

At Table 1, South did what most fair bidders would do, in refusing to bid No Trump without stoppers of some kind in the opponents' heart suit. That resulted in the side reaching a minor suit game which it failed to make. One trick was lost in hearts and two in spades.

There was a different kind of a bidder in the South seat at Table 2. He was Charles B. Grady, most consistent player of the Skytop club in Pennsylvania, who, with his son Ben, wins many tops in the club's Monday evening duplicate. He decided that, with four of the opponents' hearts in his own hand, there was a sound possibility that West might have only four of them, which he had bid in response to the double.

It turned out that Mr. Grady was right. The defenders ran four heart tricks, but then nine followed for the intrepid declarer, giving him a reward for his temerity.

Tomorrow's Problem.

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

What should North lead to the second trick, after winning the first with his club A, when trying to beat West's 4-Spades on this deal?

ISSUES RULES ON DIPHTHERIA IMMUNIZATION

Dr. Wild Says Children Should Be Given Treatment Soon; Cites Other Regulations.

In order to clarify the situation created recently by the Mansfield board of education in approving a program for general diphtheria immunization of all public school children Dr. W. B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, today announced these guidance regulations:

If the child never has been immunized and never has had the disease, he (or she) should receive the toxoid treatment without delay as about four months are necessary for development of maximum immunity.

Parents are directed to obtain a statement from the attending physician which will be presented to school authorities at the opening of the fall term.

If the child has been immunized but no certification obtained from the physician, such certificate should be obtained immediately to avoid delays when school opens.

If the child has been immunized and a certificate is unobtainable, the child should be taken to a physician who will determine whether or not active immunity is adequate at present.

If the child has had diphtheria active immunization now will not be necessary.

It is planned to make a thorough check of all public school pupils in all 12 grades this year. Hereafter, checks will be made only on first grade entrants and those transferring from other schools.

Decision on the immunization program is anticipated soon on the part of the Richland county board of education and the parochial schools.

New U. S. Tanks, World's Best

Lined up for maneuvers at Fort Knox, Ky., are several of the new United States M-4 tanks, said to be the most powerful in the world. The 28-ton monsters, which are welded instead of riveted, carry a 75-mm. gun in a revolving turret.

COST REDUCED

TULSA, Okla.—(U.P.)—A reduction from 18 cents to approximately 11 cents per gallon for 100 octane gasoline—the kind used in America's war planes—was forecast here by Dr. W. L. Nelson of the University of Tulsa.

Nelson said the high-test gasoline was a major factor in American warplane performance.

The cost of producing the gasoline now is 18 cents a gallon, but Nelson believes that plants now being built or planned will reduce that figure nearly 50 per cent.

THEATERS

War Portrait.

Intimate glimpses of English family life as it is lived today in air raid shelters and in the midst of destruction are shown in "Mrs. Miniver," filmization of Jan Struthers' widely-read novel, that continues through Friday at the Ohio. The son enlists with the daughter of the village noblewoman, the older men turn out in flimsy boats to aid in the rescue at Dunkirk, and Mrs. Miniver herself faces a threatening Nazi soldier. Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon top the cast that includes Teresa Wright and Richard Ney.

College Comedy.

College huskies spike the plans of rival co-eds in "All-American Co-ed," the comedy with music at the Madison. The plot concerns a girls' school that attempts to draw the spotlight when the action gets too thick on a neighboring campus. Marjorie Woodworth, Johnny Downs, and the Hal Roach starlets are featured. "Gentlemen After Dark," with Brian Donlevy, Miriam Hopkins and Preston Foster is the attraction.

Pixilated Comedy.

"The Remarkable Andrew," the Ritz attraction, has a pixiliated plot concerning a young bookkeeper who is guided out of a jam by a visitation from one of his historic idols, General Andrew Jackson. William Holden plays the role of the bookkeeper and Brian Donlevy has the part of General Jackson. Ellen Drew, Nydia Westman and Martha O'Driscoll are in the cast. "You're Telling Me," with Hugh Herbert, Robert Paige and Anne Gwynne is the co-feature.

Schubert's Story.

Vienna in the days of Franz Schubert, when it rang with music and song, furnishes the colorful locale for Ilona Massey's starring vehicle, "New Wine," at the Park. Schubert's music threads the picture and the score includes the rendition of "Marche Militaire" by St. Luke's choristers. Alan Curtis teamed with Miss Massey as the immortal composer and the supporting cast includes Binnie Barnes and Billy Gilbert. "Road Agent" with Leo Carrillo and Dick Foran is the co-attraction.

Turns Down 'Harvest Furlough' Appeals

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Broadway Bulletin Board.

THE Martha Stevenson-Victor Mature divorce case will be full of fireworks unless she can be talked out of it. One of the nation's biggest box office bets is involved in the current complaint. . . . The Mike ("Star and Garter"). Todds are tiffing. . . . "This Is the Army" may play a command performance at the White House. . . . The Charles Corrells (Andy of Amos and Andy) are lullabying a baby girl. . . . Col. Darryl Zanuck is now in Alaska. . . . One of Hollywood's recent "quickie" marriages is wavering, already. . . . Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City may quit political dynasty at the end of the year, turning it over to his nephew, Judge Frank Eggers. . . . Corporal Joe Louis is nursing a broken leg at Ft. Riley, Kansas. He did a Prince of Wales off his horse.

You should see the lovely jewelry Louise Macy, who weds Harry Hopkins on Thursday, has been receiving as wedding presents. . . . Glenn Miller, in 1A, is looking for a successor to pilot his crew. . . . Bette Cannon of the towel family and her mother are both in the hospital recuperating from overwork—they've been serving on so many war committees. . . . Linda Ware is working magic with Russell Swann's heart. . . . Two movie men were injured in the near-fatal accident when a truck sideswiped Deanna Durbin's car in California last week. Both will recover. . . . Laird Cregar looks like the No. 1 choice for the role of Rochester in "Jane Eyre."

Hedy Lamarr's repeat performance with John Howard, following the George Montgomery episode, hasn't clicked. Now he says he loves Janet Blair as much as he ever loved Hedy. . . . Broadway's cutest romance features Stanley Worth, vocalist with Emil Coleman's band and pretty Irene Horvath, a waitress in Horn and Hardart's Automat on 57th. They met when she portioned out his sugar! . . . Mrs. John Huston is a Reno resident. . . . Mrs. Joe Besser (he's the "Sons O Fun" comedian) is home from Doctor's hospital, where she had a narrow escape from death. . . . One of Hollywood's most famous glamor girls doesn't know what to do with the elaborate lingerie trousseau she had made at one of New York's exclusive couturiere's when she was quite sure she was going to be the bride of a fellah who decided another girl was more his dish.

Sumner Welles' son, Lieut. Benjamin Welles, is twitterpated over Babs Beckwith. . . . Choo Choo Johnson, the model, will set an all-time record when she appears on five consecutive covers of the same national magazine. . . . Peggy Joyce's new romance is Sid Durant, Jack's kid brother. . . . Zynade Spencer, the "Let's Face It" lovely, was rushed to the hospital for an appendectomy. . . . Horace Schmidlapp is the big backer of "Follies Girl," the movie to be made in the East. . . . Pat Dane has resumed with Cedric Gibbons after their scrap, quashing the reports that he would rewed Dolores Rel Rio. . . . Robert Goelet, jr., will seek to end his much-headlined difficulties by enlisting in the army. . . . Ruth Brady, who always wanted a screen contract, hated to leave for Hollywood when the time came—because she'd just met and fallen for Don Etlinger, the soldier.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—The big traffic cop at the busy intersection in New York was going about his stop - and - go assignment. He caught on the stop a certain debonairly quiet gentleman whom he recognized. He gave no sign, but went on directing the flowing river of vehicles. He was all business. But before he motioned the quiet gentleman on, he winked and said, "Hi-ya, Paul. How you like the big city?"

Coons

Paul Lukas likes to tell the story today. He likes to talk about New York. He likes New York. He will tell you about the big town's easy friendliness. He will even defend the climate—granted air-conditioning—of Manhattan. And then he will admit, with wise humor, that he would be as fond of Oshkosh if he had had a little success in Oshkosh.

PAUL, the Hungarian-born actor, has had his "little success" in New York. He was star of the hit play, "The Watch on the Rhine," which is why—obviously to anyone who knows his Hollywood ABC's—he is again a star in Hollywood, making the film version of the hit play with a girl named Bette Davis in the cast.

If he is like other heroes of this old familiar filmland story, Paul has been making the discovery that a lot of movie people who looked past him before he clicked on Broadway now are "seeing" him. Not only seeing him but exclaiming with delight, "Paul! My old friend!" If he is like the other come-backs to fame, Paul has been responding to these gushing cordialities as any normally sensitive person would. As one of them told me once: "First it angers you. Then it becomes amusing. Then it seems pathetic. And finally it is sickening. It makes you retch."

But Paul Lukas, if he shared these reactions, is far too discreet to say so. Or too polite.

HE SAYS he wants to keep on working in Hollywood as well as on the stage. He wishes that Hollywood were not so given to "type-casting" as it is—that the casting directories were indexed for "actors" rather than for "types." You will find players catalogued as gangsters, district attorneys, detectives, housemaids, society matrons, gunmolls. If Lukas had been so classified in recent years, it would doubtless have been under "Nazi agents." Such were his roles in "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," in "We Dare Not Love" and other pre-Broadway films.

On the other hand, it was type-casting to which he owed his chance in "Watch on the Rhine." He was contracted for a role in "Hold Back the Dawn" when Herman Shumlin (now directing the "Rhine" film) sought him for the play. When he asked release from the picture it was readily granted—the director had seen Lukas in "The Monster and the Girl," had decided he was too "tough and hard" for the "Dawn" role.

And so it came about that the big traffic cop could say "Hi-ya, Paul. How you like the big city?" and that Paul Lukas is back in pictures with a big refurbished name.

WOULD CHANNEL HIGH INCOMES INTO WAR BONDS

Brown Asks Personal Revenue Over $25,000 Yearly Be Held For Post-War Uses.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—A proposal to channel all individual incomes above $25,000 a year into government bonds for the duration of the war was advanced today by Senator Brown (D.-Mich.) a member of the senate finance committee considering the program to add $6,271,000,000 to the nation's revenue.

Brown told reporters he believed some such compromise may provide a workable way of putting into effect President Roosevelt's suggestion to limit net incomes of all persons to $25,000 a year, after payment of taxes.

A half dozen representatives of CIO unions, led by Nathan E. Cowan, told the committee yesterday that the workers of the nation were looking to congress to carry out the president's proposal, which was not acted upon by the house when it approved the present program.

Expressing approval of the limitation principle, Brown said he had been studying the possibility of attaining it through the instituton of a post-war rebate provision such as the treasury has recommended for corporation excess profits taxes.

Under terms of such an amendment, Brown said, the treasury might take the surplus above $25,000 left to any individual after payment of his taxes in a levy for bonds that would be repayable after the war for capital expenditures or for outlays that would produce peace-time employment.

The committee heard a suggestion yesterday from Roy Little of Providence, R. I., president of the Atlantic Rayon Corporation, that it boost individual income taxes so that he and others like him would have to pay double the $7,000 which he said would be due next year on his 1942 $20,000 net taxable income.

The witness said the $7,000 was "too damn little" tax for him to pay and expressed the opinion that the treasury could get an additional $1,000,000,000 from persons in his income class if rates were doubled.

DOCKERY SPEAKS

Campaigns For Congress In Talk Here Friday Night.

Making his first public campaign appearance in Mansfield, Col. Oliver H. Dockery, jr., retired army officer, will speak on "Politics in Defense" at Radio City hall, North Walnut street, at 8:30 p. m. Friday.

Col. Dockery, who lives in Newark, is a candidate for the Republican nomination for congress from the 17th district, which comprises Richland, Ashland, Coshocton, Delaware, Knox and Licking counties. He is opposing J. Harry McGregor, incumbent.

Col. Dockery said he would charge McGregor with playing politics with the nation's defense effort, on the basis of his voting record before Pearl Harbor. Col. Dockery served 43 years in the regular army.

Clevelander Insists He's Been 'Good Citizen' Since Escape.

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—Byron T. Moore, 42, Cleveland truck driver who insisted that he had been a "good citizen" since his escape from the Junction City prison brick plant in 1926, returned to Ohio penitentiary today.

Moore must complete a robbery sentence imposed upon him at Lorain in 1924. His identity was established through fingerprints taken in his capacity as a war worker.

CALL COLUMBUS 'WORST CITY'

Federal Representatives Spur Ohio Capital To Action Against Prostitutes.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—A federal health service representative's assertion that Columbus has the highest July venereal disease incidence of "any town in the fifth service command" spurred municipal officials today in efforts to combat prostitution.

Mayor Floyd F. Green and judicial, health and police officials conferred after Col. Frank V. Meriweather of the U. S. public health service reported three types of prostitution had spread venereal disease.

He listed clandestine prostitutes who operate from drinking establishment; houses of prostitution and "good girls with bad habits."

Prostitutes must be driven out, Meriweather told police officers yesterday at a meeting called by the federal bureau of investigation and the state health department. Girls with bad habits, he said, should be sent into industry "where they can do good."

Dr. R. H. Markwith, state health director, asserted that "honky-tonks, dance halls and such places x x x must realize their responsibilities" in protecting soldiers.

The meeting followed an army threat to invoke the May act and call in federal officers if police failed to clean up vice in this area.

KILLER SHOT

Firing Squad Exacts Last Penalty From Hitch-Hike Slayer.

STATE PRISON YARD, SALT LAKE CITY—(INS)—Donald Lawton Condit, 25, a hitch-hiker killer from Los Angeles, was executed today by a firing squad for the slaying of Harold A. Thorne, a Salt Lake City salesman.

The riflemen fired their volley at 6:10 a. m. (MWT) and it appeared that Condit was dead one minute later.

DELEGATES ARRIVE TOMORROW FOR STATE LODGE CONVENTION

Delegates to the 31st bi-ennial convention of the Sons and Daughters of Herman will arrive in Mansfield tomorrow for the opening of a three-day session as guests of Mansfield Lodge No. 14.

Approximately 500 delegates and their families from 27 Ohio lodges are expected to attend, according to Nick Schlitter, convention committee chairman.

In addition to addresses by prominent lodge officials, the series of programs will feature a dance and song fest by the local organization's Harmonizers club. The glee club, the only one in the state connected with the Sons and Daughters of Herman, was organized by Director Ferdinand Schwaner, sr., more than a year and a half ago. The organization is now made up of 10 men and 12 women.

Vice President Martin Vogel, a veteran bandmaster in Mansfield, heads the Sons of Herman dance band, which will furnish music for the convention dance.

The last state convention was held at Akron in 1940 when it was decided to hold the next gathering at Mansfield. The Mansfield lodge was organized, Nov. 22, 1922, by John Pifer of Crestline, still president of the Crestline organization.

Current officers of the Mansfield lodge are John Graf, president; Vogel, vice president; Peter Zeides, recording secretary; Steve Hetler, jr., financial secretary; and George Hammer, treasurer. Officers of the sister lodge are Katie Graf, president; Margaret Vogel, vice president; Elizabeth Zeigler, recording secretary; Eva Michaels, financial secretary, and Margaret Mitsch, treasurer.

LONG ILLNESS ENDS IN DEATH

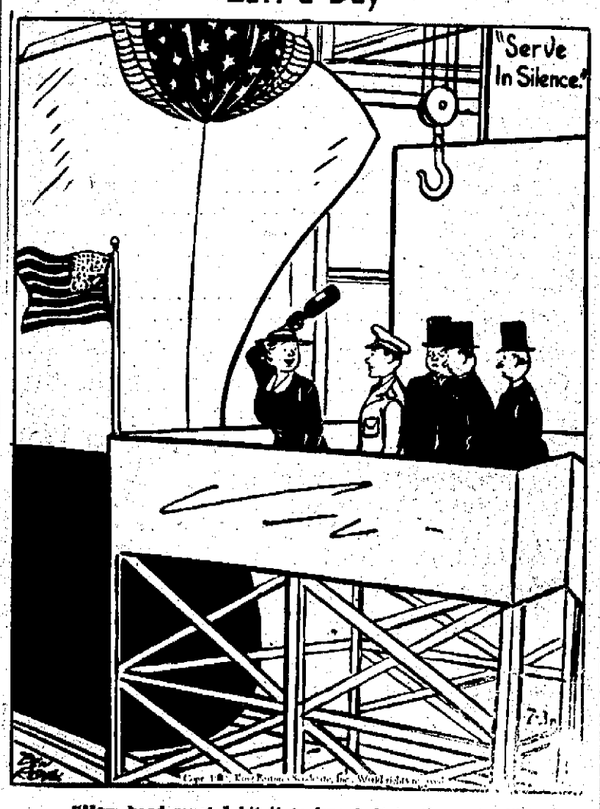
Leslie T. Sears, 77, Succumbs at Home Near Sparta.

FREDERICKTOWN—Leslie T. Sears, 77, died Wednesday at his home south of Sparta following a lingering illness.

Surviving are his widow, Minnie; three daughters, Mrs. Clarence Messmore, of Edison, Mrs. Gladys Pearl, of Centerburg, and Miss Victorine Sears, of Elyria; three sons, William, of Mt. Vernon, and Howard and Ralph of Centerburg; four grandchildren, and a sister, Mrs. Carrie Wickens, Detroit.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday at Bloomfield church. Rev. W. M. Lockard, of Mt. Vernon, will officiate. Burial will be in Bloomfield cemetery.

Laff-a-Day



"How hard must I hit it to knock it in the water?"

UP AND DOWN THE STREET

Y. M. C. A. officials are proud of the fact that during this summer's swimming classes in the Y pool, 23 Mansfield boys have been taught to swim by Physical Director John W. Fike. The classes meet twice a week for periods of an hour in length. According to Fike the biggest problem encountered in teaching the novice is overcoming his natural fear of the water. After that it's just a matter of a little time and practice.

Two Tennessee residents were on their way home today after a nine-hour internment in the city jail while Cleveland authorities investigated a report that both men were driving cars loaded with illegally-obtained automobile tires. The men were taken into custody by Mansfield police at the intersection of Lexington avenue and Cook road shortly after they had received notification from the Massillon police radio station. They were released this morning upon order of the Cleveland detective bureau, after an investigation revealed the men had purchased 28 retreaded tires and that the transaction was proper.

Although the new V-Mail service is becoming increasingly prevalent in the mail from armed forces abroad the local demand for the combination letter paper and envelope from parents and friends is still small, according to Postmaster Herman E. Homberger. Free V-Mail service supplies have been available at the post-office for several weeks although only one envelope-sheet can be distributed to the same person in one day. The service was recently instituted to provide the most expeditious dispatch and reduce the weight of mail to and from the personnel of American armed forces outside the continental United States.

Probably the most unusual reunion that will be held in Ohio this summer is being planned by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sattler of Mansfield as chairman and secretary of the Ohio Civil War Reunion committee. Invited to the reunion, which will be held Aug. 22 and 23 at the O. S. and S. O. home in Xenia, are the 94 remaining Civil war veterans in Ohio. Their average age is 94 years and six months and many of them are not expected to be able to attend. Some are still fairly active, however. Mrs. Sattler said, and they will have a lot of memories to revive when they get together.

NAMED COACH

Bender of Mt. Gilead to Take Post at Shelby High.

SHELBY—Thomas E. (Tommy) Bender, former Mt. Gilead high school coach, today was named physical education director and football coach at Shelby high school, and Lawrence B. Swackhammer, former Ohio University athletic star, was appointed basketball coach and industrial arts teacher, School Superintendent C. G. Keck announced.

Bender, one-time Ashland college football star, coached at Mt. Gilead six years, and for the past six years has been coach at Logan, O., high school.

Swackhammer has been a member of the Mt. Vernon high school coaching staff for the past two years.

The appointments were made by the Shelby board of education to fill the vacancies created by the resignation last spring of Coach William Query, who held both the football and basketball coaching jobs.

POLICE GUARD WATER SYSTEM

Called Out As Canton Workers Prepare To Strike.

CANTON—(U.P.)—Police guarded Canton's waterworks system today to protect the city water supply as 86 water department employes prepared to strike at midnight. Mayor Ed S. Folk promised that the water supply would not be "tampered with."

The State, County and Municipal Workers of America (CIO) called the strike in connection with its demand for union recognition by the city.

"We have no intention of destroying the water system," a union spokesman said. "The mayor will not confer with us and attempt to settle this dispute in the true democratic fashion."

STIMSON SAYS 'WORK LEAVES' UNNEEDED NOW

Declares All Interference With Combat Preparation Must Be Halted.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Every interference with the rapid and efficient preparation of the armed forces for combat must be halted at once, Secretary Stimson said today in response to appeals for furlough of military personnel during the harvest season.

Exceptions to this policy, he said in a letter to Senator Nye (R., N. D.), were being confined to cases of extreme emergency, and excessive furloughs or leaves would "prejudice the progressive growth of our military power."

"If it should develop that the American people are confronted with a food emergency which cannot be met by existing surpluses," Stimson added, "the use of military personnel may be considered, but only if all sources of harvest labor have been exhausted and the military personnel is employed as units and not as individuals."

Stimson wrote Nye that his department was being "besieged" with requests for release and furlough of soldiers on various grounds but that American participation in the war had brought a responsibility demanding rigid adherence to the objective of developing, in the shortest possible time, a highly trained military force.

"It is our responsibility to win the war x x x.

"To accomplish this we must have skilled, hardened soldiers who are better prepared and more highly proficient in the science of warfare than our enemies whose preparation for this conflict extends over a period of ten years and longer."

Concluding that Stimson had "missed the point of immediate seriousness" involved in the northwest harvest, Nye asked for a conference with the war secretary, declaring:

"If surpluses and production were matters that could be taken care of at a moment's notice, I could better appreciate the apparent willingness at this time to overlook the grave danger of loss and waste which might prevail in the northwest if adequate and experienced labor hands are not made available to the farmers for use in this season."

Nye said individuals who were taken from the farms and who were now in military training camps and not military units were needed in the harvest fields. He contended "reasonable furloughs would accomplish this.

Ford Busy With War Effort on 79th Birthday

DEARBORN, Mich.—(INS)—Henry Ford, busy directing the war production activities of his vast industrial empire, today celebrated his 79th birthday.

Except for one public appearance at the Ford Naval Training school where officers, enlisted men and civilian personnel were to be awarded a treasury department flag for more than 90 per cent participation in the purchase of war bonds, Ford's birthday was devoted strictly to business and to an interview with newspapermen.

The most notable accomplishment of the industrial wizard during the past year has been the construction of the huge Ford bomber plant at nearby Willow Run.

When in full production, the Willow Run plant will turn out more heavy bombers than the Axis nations combined.

In good health, Ford wasn't much concerned about the passing of another year. Reminded earlier in the week that his birthday was near, he remarked:

"Golly, that's right. I do have another birthday coming. "Never felt better."

12-DAY WAR JOB STRIKE ENDED

250 Workers Return To Frigidaire Plant At Dayton.

DAYTON—(U.P.)—American Federation of Labor construction workers returned to their jobs today on the new Moraine city plant of the Frigidaire division of General Motors, ending a 12-day strike, when the war production board promised a decision by Monday in a four-month-old jurisdictional dispute.

About 250 AFL building tradesmen walked out to protest the governmental agent's failure to render a decision in the jurisdictional dispute with the Congress of Industrial Organizations that began last March.

17 FROM AREA LEAVE TO TAKE OATH OF NAVY

Eight Richland Countians Are Among New Contingent Enlisting in Service.

Seventeen Mansfield area youths who were recently enlisted at the naval recruiting station here left yesterday for Cleveland where they will take the oath of allegiance. They will go from there to Great Lakes, Ill., for basic training.

Eight Richland countians including four Mansfield boys, were among the contingent. Two each were listed from Ashland and Knox counties. There were five from Crawford county.

One of the enlistees, Roy W. Baumberger, 21, of 29 Bahl avenue is the last of three brothers to enter navy service in the past two months. A younger brother, Richard L., enlisted May 27 and an older brother, Paul W., left Mansfield June 8. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. David H. Baumberger.

Another set of brothers, Harry E. and Homer L. Rhodes of Crestline were among the recruits leaving this morning.

Entering the navy today from Richland county were Eugene C. Bertsch, Geddes avenue; Roy W. Baumberger, 29 Bahl avenue; Chester C. Fischer, 478 Wood street; Orland Mott, 354 South Diamond street; Joseph M. Bruner, Lexington R. D. 2; Verdis D. Roberts, Butler; Allan W. Spangler of Shelby; and Harry C. See of Lexington.

Going from Crawford county were James C. Pesek and the Rhodes brothers, all of Crestline; William C. Brooks of Bucyrus and Charles C. Ramsey of Galion. Others leaving were William E. Houle and John E. Cochren, both of Mt. Vernon; and Ralph E. Kendall and John J. Rudd of Ashland.

Eighty-eight per cent of all American truck operators own only one vehicle.

MOONHOLLOW + + +

CHAPTER XV

At last he came to the top of the hill, where in a grassy clearing a small open shelter stood, looking down on the blue verge of the sound. A bench ran around the inside of the resting place. He stopped a moment, and looked back, feeling what he saw between the veil of pine trees where hills to the west traced a dark curve against the afternoon sky, and where the waters of the sound still reflected the ripened glory of the day. The beauty of it, and the sharp sweetness of the spring air, and the murmuring, innumerable sounds of the wood, and the half-conscious memories involved in it all, made him sigh. He sat on the bench, and buried his face in his arms.

Long fingers of sunlight trembled through the trees, touched his head and blended with his blond hair. A thrush warbled, honey-throated, then, wondering why it had not charmed its listener flew down to the ledge near the boy's arm. It looked at his closed eyes—then flew away.

Boris had hunted a rabbit, swum in the Sound, barked and otherwise revelled in canine fashion. The salt air whetted his appetite; he climbed a sand-covered hillock jutting out into the ocean and sat there chewing on dried grass blades.

He was hungry! He turned toward Moonhollow, made it in a fast run and clawed at the kitchen door until the cook fed him.

Then he wandered through the house, sniffing contentedly here and there, glad to be home, and sought Audrey.

Audrey chided him for his long disappearance and asked him how he had got along with Leslie; he wagged his head.

An hour later Audrey noticed that although Boris had returned, Leslie had not. She wondered whether the boy had ceased to dislike the dog, and thought it was time to question him about it. So she sent Petty to find Leslie and bring him to her. But the dark-eyed French maid returned without him. "Monsieur Leslie was not at home!"

At dinner time Leslie was still absent. Audrey became worried. No one, not even the omniscient children, had seen him since he left in the afternoon with the dog.

When the cloak of night was dropping over the woods and the Sound, she called the county police.

They came quickly, three of them in a squad car, with a plain clothesman who kept his hat off inside the house and refused to smoke a cigar.

They had riot guns and a siren and first-aid kit which made her feel sickish. "Suppose Leslie had gone for a swim in the Sound?" Audrey thought. Then she swallowed hard and led the searching party along the bridle path, their huge hand-light glowing like a cyclopean eye in the gloom. "It wasn't likely that Leslie would take a swim without his bathing suit."

They followed the path, casting the light to left and right, disturbing the sleeping birds, arousing an owl which inquired about them with a "whooo" that sent shivers up Audrey's spine.

They called Leslie's name—only the night sounds of the words came back in answer.

Then when they neared the summer-house shelter they flashed the light there and saw his golden head. He was asleep. Audrey told them to be quiet. They stood by. She sat down close to the boy. She placed her arm under his head and drew him to her. He nodded his head like a lily stalk, she turned up his face to hers, kissed his nose.

Blindly his arms went about her.

"Leslie," she said then again, "Leslie. Wake up. Dear."

He opened his eyes, stared, then remembered.

"I'm awfully sorry, Mrs. Blake," he whispered, as he sat up. "Boris was your dog, not mine. I had no right to let him run away. But I didn't see that until after I had done it. I tried to find him, really I did—" He was silent for a moment. "I'll get you another dog just like him some day."

"Why get me another dog like Boris if you don't like him?"

"But you do."

"Oh, Leslie, Leslie, Leslie, I'm sorry I insisted that you make friends with Boris. I won't again. You mustn't ever frighten me like this again. I love you much, very, very much, more than I love Boris." She linked his arm with hers. "Now come home. It's very late."

Audrey explained how Boris had quite naturally returned to Moonhollow.

"I think I've discovered something important," he said.

"What?" she asked.

"I never felt as miserable as I did today!"

And so they went home together, his hand in hers. He asked to be kissed good night; she kissed him.

Oliver returned from his plane trip west quite happy. His sick brother in the west was much better. Everything was the same as when he had left except that he soon realized that the "Limey kid" Leslie Curtis was now more firmly entrenched in Audrey's affections. If Oliver thought of Gordon Blake as being an impediment, he saw this war-stricken youth, an encroachment and intrusion. A hundred petty annoyances angered them both.

Leslie had given Oliver a sporting chance, but now put him upon his blacklist. The enmity broke into open warfare when Oliver brushed Leslie's hat into the mud. The boys were at an American game, Cowboys and Indians, and sported an odd assortment of weapons. Twenty feet away, Leslie stuck a heavy arrow into his bow. Oliver gulped with surprise as it caught him in the neck. This was most inopportune for Oliver, who was parading his artficial dignity before Petty, Audrey's new personal French maid, whose name was really Jeannette.

She looked fresh in black and white like a doll. Dark hair fell short and straight about her oval face, and the ends of the hair, at front, were turned up, giving her a pert, insouciant look.

She spoke in a girlish voice, sometimes mixing English and French in her excitement, especially over the children, who loved her.

In the cold eyes of Oliver, she was a French importation — and the only sprightly note in the dull monotony of acting butler to a bunch of children.

But his amorous advances, thrilled her not, and the voice of Oliver, unlike that of the turtle, was not answered.

Flirtation having failed, and time precious, and springtime short, Oliver tried a more direct approach, the one of economic oppression.

"Petty, my dear," he said, "after dinner tonight come to my room. I have something very important to tell you."

"Dans votre chambre! Your room! . . . Oh! No, No. That's not possible, Mr. Oliver," she exclaimed excitedly.

"Call me Alvin, cherie, when we aren't in Mrs. Morley's presence," he said, patting her. "You're a very pretty girl, I like you very much."

"Laisseb moi . . . You cochon! . . . Don't touch me."

"I'll surely expect you tonight," he said in a loud sharp voice. "I've some rare old Napoleon brandy."

"I don't drink cognac . . . no merci."

"Mrs. Morley plans to make some changes in her staff. That means some of the help will be let go—discharged. You may be among them."

"But Madame, she likes me."

'YANKEE DOODLE DANDY' FILM WINS PRAISE AS ONE OF BEST

Sometime in the early fall season, Mansfield is going to see one of the greatest and most patriotism-stirring movies of the year —"Yankee Doodle Dandy."

Newspaper critics, columnists and others who have seen preview screenings of it over the nation agree that it's one of the most sensational pictures Hollywood has ever offered. Such was the opinion of a group of Ohio newspapermen who saw the Warner Bros., film screened in Cleveland Monday night.

In it, James Cagney, as George M. Cohan, gives an "all out" performance, dynamically and colorfully portraying three decades in the life of America's No. 1 song-and-dance man. Cagney really gives his all in a performance which puts him in line for the academy awards.

The picture takes you from Cohan's birth July 4, 1878; on through the period when the Cohan family appeared in backcountry vaudeville; during the hardships when the family was virtually "black-listed" by movie houses; and on up to the time Cohan finally "crashed" Broadway and, with Sam Harris, became a successful theatrical producer.

Walter Huston, close friend for many years, plays the role of Cohan's father. Rosemary DeCamp is cast as his mother and Cagney's sister, Jeanne Cagney, plays the role of the sister. All do a splendid job.

The picture is a flag-waver without apology, for all during his life Cohan was a flag waver. The real Cohan, is now 64 and is in a hospital, had to approve every page of the script. It was one of the stipulations which he made when he agreed to permit Warner Bros., to compose a film around his life.

Such unforgettable Cohan numbers as "Over There," "Give My Regards to Broadway," "So, Long, Mary," "The Yankee Doodle Boy," "You're a Grand Old Flag," and "Guess I'll Have to Telegraph My Baby" and several other old-time favorites are included.

Cagney won heaps of praise in a number of pictures, but it is doubtful if he will ever turn in a performance greater than "Yankee Doodle Dandy." He apears in nearly every scene of the musical show. He sings and dances like he has never done before in pictures.

The picture builds up to climax after climax and it could have been cut off after most any one of them and still leave an audience satisfied that it had seen a bang-up movie.

Some of the old-timers who saw the screening in Cleveland were doubly enthused by the production. They remembered and saw the real Cohan go through those dancing paces, and those song numbers in the old days.

The average federal old-age assistance payment in June, 1941, was $21.08.

The Mayer of Stocking avenue and holder of Possum Run's golf championship has a chance this season to cop two club titles, but he'll have a tough way to go to take even one, if my links operatives inform me correctly.

Joe has joined Coolridge for the last half of the season, for the fun of joining in the famous Coolridge "Army of Occupation" skin games which sometimes have as many as nine or 12 golfers battling for the rake-off on a lucky hole. Skins are few and far between, but when they hit, they're worth it.

That makes Mayer eligible for the Coolridge tournament, now in the qualifying round, and he's expected to defend his Possum Run title.

Hottest swinger on the Coolridge layout right now is Ray Malaska, who has suddenly made a habit of turning in cards of 32, two under par.

And right behind him is Frank Jocha, consistently batting around par figures, while defending Champion Steve Sirtzinger, Jim Musille, and Joe "Spindle" Kasper are not to be counted out without argument.

Out at Possum, Al Kushin has been the most consistent hot shot of the season, while Pete Linster, finalist in last year's tourney, and some more of the boys are far from willing to let Joe keep his crown by default.

Bob Moorhead and Al Hager appear to have the inside track on the championship at Westbrook where match play in the annual tournament started this week.

With the present champion, Bill Black, jr., in the army, Moorhead, champion in 1940 and medalist in the present tourney, and Hager, holder of the Westbrook course record, champion of last year's Richland county tournament held at Westbrook, and second medalist in the present club tourney, must rank as favorites.

And I assume you know that Hager is Joe Mayer's cousin and credits Joe with teaching him all he knows about this game of golf.

All of which should line up a bigger and better than ever Richland county tournament this fall, in spite of the fact that many of Mansfield's top notch golfers are now in the army.

With Hager and Mayer and Malaska and Jocha and Linster and Moorhead and Musille and Carl Wiseman and Pete Zeides and Sturtzinger and Kasper still around and shooting, there's no reason why the county tournament shouldn't be played this year, war or no war.

But up to now I haven't heard of any plans for staging the third annual county joust. Perhaps the boys are waiting for club titles to be decided.

You know, I'm more than a little bit interested in Ray Malaska's climb to the top ranks of Mansfield golf this summer.

Last spring, a week or two before he left for the army, Vin Malaska was telling me: "I've got a kid brother who could be the best golfer in this town if he'd quit playing softball and concentrate on golf. He's got the smoothest natural swing of any young golfer I know."

And it looks like Ray the Horse is living up to his brother's prediction.

Irish McGee, Possum Run operator, fears he'll not be around when his champion is crowned come early autumn.

"Somebody else will probably have to finish up the tournament chores out here," said McGee in announcing the club qualifier for next Sunday to the following Sabbath.

You'll recall that Irish spent last winter working in an airplane plant in California, and since returning from the coast he has gone to school for further instructions along that airplane assembly line.

And now his name is on the line with both the army and the navy for more work in the bomber building business. He's just waiting a call.

* * *

That's all right Irish. You go right ahead and build those bombers. I think maybe Billie can handle the tournament okey dokey. And besides, that would give us one golf pro I could beat . . . if she given me enough strokes.

Weatherly Breaks Up Ball Game

Hits Single With Sacks Loaded in 11th Inning.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Cleveland's Redskins won another chance to climb into a virtual tie for second place with the Boston Red Sox today.

By beating the Bosox, 7 to 6, in 11 innings yesterday, the Tribe cut Boston's grip on the runner-up spot to one game and a few percentage points.

For the job of evening the series at two games each, the Indians called on Mel Harder. The visitors named Oscar Judd.

Roy Weatherly broke up yesterday's game with a single to the right field wall with two out and the bases loaded. It climaxed a game in which 17 Indians and 15 Bosox played, 21 bases on balls were granted, and in which Boston outhit Cleveland 10 to 9.

* * *

Chubby Dean started for Cleveland, and Boston scored a pair of runs off him in the third and another brace in the sixth. Meanwhile the Redskins tallied four off starter Ken Chase in the third, and broke into a 5-4 lead by plating another marker in the sixth. Boston tied it up in the next inning when Vernon Kennedy came in to hurl for Cleveland and, then forged ahead 6-5, in the eighth before Tom Ferrick could rescue Kennedy and retire the side.

The Tribe tied the score for the third time in its half of the same inning by "walking" off Mace Brown, who had replaced Chase in the seventh.

Red Embree came in to pitch for the Tribe, and held Boston to one hit in three innings.

Yank Terry, who went to the mound for Boston in the ninth, was charged with the defeat.

Kansas City Takes Lead

Turbulent Association Race Straightened Out.

The American association's turbulent pennant race, which contributed a new leader, a first place tie and almost a three-way deadlock since the start of the week, returned to normalcy today. The association's norm, that is.

Kansas City was back in first place by a full game over Milwaukee.

Third place Columbus, within a half game of the lead early yesterday, found itself two and a half games off the pace.

Kansas City regained the lead it lost to Milwaukee Sunday by sweeping a double-header with Columbus, 3-2 and 9-5.

At Milwaukee the Toledo Mudhens ran their winning streak to seven by taking the first game of a double-header, 3-2, but were over-powered in the second, 10-7.

The Louisville Colonels made it three out of four against St. Paul by winning yesterday, 6 to 1.

Minneapolis salvaged the last of a three game series with Indianapolis, 7 to 1.

BUCK GRID TICKET SALE HITS SLUMP

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Sale of season tickets to Ohio State university's home football games is 20 per cent below last year and nine per cent less than in July, 1940, Henry D. Taylor, ticket director, announced today.

Despite tire rationing, out-of-town purchases have exceeded sales to Columbus fans, usually the team's heaviest supporters. Aug. 15 is the final sale date for season books.

DAYTON CLIMBS IN MID-ATLANTIC RACE

ERIE, Pa. —(AP)— Dayton, in fourth place 10 days ago, meets Erie tonight in the second contest of a four-game battle for second place in the Mid-Atlantic league. Erie holds a one and one-half game edge in the standings.

The Ducks registered their eighth win in nine starts last night, defeating the Sailors 4 to 2. Zanesville downed Canton 5 to 3. The Springfield-Charleston game was postponed and a doubleheader scheduled for tonight.

Ray Robinson Proves Puzzle

Experts Can't Figure Out How He Does It.

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—The boxing world is waiting for the percentages to catch up with Ray (Sugar) Robinson, the sensational young welterweight who never has been beaten as an amateur or professional.

The experts can't digest young Robinson. He's a punching puzzle who defies explanation. Because of his build and his style, he should have been beaten plenty. But he never was.

This tall, Negro kid from Harlem, who'd rather dance than fight, has hammered out the longest consecutive winning streak in pugilistic history. He has registered 121 straight victories as amateur and professional—89 as a simon pure and 32 as a pro.

Even Joe Louis, who enjoyed perhaps the most swath-cutting rise in heavyweight history, was knocked out by Max Schmeling in his 28th professional fight, after having various difficulties as an amateur. And Jack Dempsey not only was knocked out by Jim Flynn early in his career, but he also lost a four-round decision to Fat Willie Meehan a short time later. And we saw Dempsey almost get his belly caved in back in 1915 in a 10-round bout with Johnny Sudenberg at Tonapah, Nev. He barely won the decision and was sick at the final bell.

If young Robinson were a compact slugger who came in barricaded by forehead and elbows, with a lethal hook in either hand, Lammers' Lane might understand his consecutive streak. But 21-year-old Sugar is not that type. He's a long, tall kid, who packs only about 143 pounds on a six-foot chassis.

And he's a straight up-and-down performer. Moreover, he's a lad who combines Fancy-Dan boxing with one-punch knock-out slugging. He doesn't shuffle in like Louis. No sir, he gallops about the ring like a love-smitten antelope. He neither bobs nor weaves. And at close quarters, he merely holds his head high—as if in disdain—and makes virtually no hostile moves toward his clinching opponent.

Meanwhile, Robinson is in constant motion—leaving that length of coastline from upper ribs to belt exposed to any submarine attack. And boxing results down through the years, cry aloud that a man with a long waistline can't take it down stairs.

Robinson's private life is far different from that of Louis, if we can believe reports that trickle down from Harlem. They say his night club pace is terrific, and that he can't last.

But—despite the consecutive percentages, his style, his build and his love of night clubs, Robinson will be favored to lick Sammy Angott tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden, in their return 10-round bout. About a year ago, Robinson won a close decision over Angott in their first meeting. Angott is lightweight champion of the world, now. But his title is not at stake. It should be a great fight, and we predict that Robinson will win with ease.

Phellis of New York and I. W. Gleason of Williamsport, Pa. Colby Hanover won seven of his 11 starts last season as a two-year-old.

Dodgers Once Blew Long Lead

But They Show No Sign of Doing It Again.

By LAWTON CARVER

NEW YORK—(INS)—"Statistics are crazy little things," the man said, burrowing deeper into the grayed, age-yellowed newspaper clippings and digging at the innards of the baseball record books. He jotted down another row of dates and numbers on the figure-spattered sheets of paper strewn around the room.

* * *

"Statistics show, for instance, that the Dodgers havn't won the pennant yet," said the man, who may be identified as Bill Brandt, head of the national league service bureau and currently engaged in trying to keep interest alive in the national league race.

Actually, of course, the Dodgers haven't repeated, but everybody was beginning to assume that they had a pretty good imitation thereof with their eight game lead at this stage of the proceedings.

But Mr. Brandt reveals that the Dodgers once were much farther in front of the St. Louis Cardinals than they now are and still blew it. The Cards rose up, cake-walked through the stretch, picked up 17 games on the Dodgers and won the pennant going away to leave the Dodgers back in fourth place. That was back in 1930.

To be exact, on the night of Friday, Aug. 30, 1930, the Dodgers had won 61 games and lost 39 and the Cards were in fourth place with 49 and 49, trailing not only the Dodgers, but also the Chicago Cubs and New York Giants. The Cards were 11 games off the Dodgers' pace.

Nobody gave the Cards much of a tumble. They didn't figure to overtake three clubs through the stretch, after playing only .500 ball up to that point.

Then the Cards began to go. They moved into third, then into second and finally into first place with a spurt through their last 54 games that gave them 41 victories against only 13 defeats and the pennant with 92 wins against 62 losses.

Those budding gas-housers not only overcame the 11-game edge they had spotted the Dodgers earlier in the race, but added six games to it to knock the Dodgers back into fourth place, the latter exchange positions with the Cards in the standings. The Cubs and Giants clung to second and third places all the way to the finish.

However, in pointing out all those perhaps significant facts, Brandt stumbled over some more as he toyed with statistics. His attention was arrested in a moment by a little clump of figures off by itself and he stood transfixed, like a real good bird dog which has come to a rigid point as he unexpectedly stumbles on a covey under a huckleberry bush.

Mr. Brandt discovered to his horror, in trying to build up the Cards, that perhaps these current Dodgers are better than those 1930 Dodgers.

"Yes, I guess it shows it right here," he said, pointing to a discovery.

It seems that when the Dodgers made it two out of three over the Cards last night and won their 69th game that they had approached some record for this point in the national league pennant race.

If they can win two more in a row they will reach 100 games with 71 wins against only 29 defeats, which would be more victories than any club has won in the first hundred since 1912 when the Giants made it 72 to 28. The next best record is the 69-31 made by the Giants in 1913, while the all-time mark is 73-27 set by the Cubs in 1907.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR

NEW YORK—(Wide World — American soldiers are taking their sports along wherever they go, thereby adding greatly to the confusion of world affairs . . . recently we've seen a report from Australia on an American football game played there and from Belfast on a clash between soldier baseball teams . . . the Aussie scribe couldn't quite figure out why it was called 'football' when there was so little kicking and the Irishman concluded: "One thing Belfast 'fans' will have to remember in the future if they want to appear knowledgeable. Never applaud or get excited about an ordinary or fairly high 'fly' ball."

TODAY'S GUEST STAR

Pete Norton, Tampa (Fla.) Tribune: "It sounds like the truth . . . 81,810 citizens of New Jersey and Pennsylvania shelled out $2,800,000 in bets at the new Camden track last week . . . If each of these bettors had stayed home, added $7.50 to the $30 at the race track, he could have bought a $50 war bond . . . and very likely have saved gasoline, tires and wear and tear on his nervous system."

Jimmy Johnston's latest communique to the press is all about Adam Spencer, a young negro heavyweight whom Jimmy claims Bob Pastor discovered working as a sparring partner in Stillman's gym . . . Jimmy makes Adam sound very good, but privately he adds: "You can get more money with a bum heavyweight than with a champion in any other class."

Willard Wins In 9th Frame

Meet Travelers Again at Fairground Friday.

Willard V. F. W. staged a two-run rally in the ninth inning to edge Mansfield Travelers last evening in a baseball game at Willard 7 to 6.

Until the ninth, Willard had collected only three hits off big Bob Martin, but they got to him for five safe blows in the winning rally.

Each team has now won one game, but they'll play off the rubber at the Fairground tomorrow evening at 6:30. Pat Patterson will be on the hill for the Travelers.

INJURIES, ILLNESS FORCE CANCELLATION

Injuries and illness forced North Ridgeville girls to cancel their softball game here Sunday with Mansfield Provident Loans, it was learned today.

The Ridgeville second sacker, bumped Donna Schuster of the Providents sliding into second base recently, was later found to have suffered a fractured leg. Three of the Ridgeville girls are reported sick. And they start their district tournament at Oberlin Monday. The Providents will go to Elyria Sunday.

Ohio Coaching Staff Changed

Three Grid Vacancies Will Go Unfilled.

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—Ohio State university must ration its coaching material in the coming athletic season, since available coaches are being swept up by the draft, commissions, or war production jobs.

Shifting in manpower of the physical education department will act as stop-gaps for several existing coaching vacancies, Athletic Director L. W. St. John said today.

A new wrestling coach has been appointed to succeed Bernard F. "Spike" Mooney who now is a lieutenant in the coast guard, St. John said. The new coach is Anthony (Tony) Montenerro, Ohio's Big Ten champion in the 155-pound class in 1940, who captained the wrestling teams in his senior year.

"Positions left open by the enlistment of Ed Blickle, Trever Rees, and Fritz Heisler in the navy's pre-flight school will not be filled," St. John said.

Blickle was assistant football coach and freshman basketball director, while Rees and Heisler handled freshman football candidates.

Ernie Godfrey who was line coach under Paul Brown's predecessor, Francis Schmidt, will handle freshman football in addition to his duties in the physical education department.

On the basketball court, Jimmie Hull, captain and leading scorer of the Scarlet cage team which annexed the Big Ten title in 1939, will whip the frosh into shape. Last year, Hull assisted Head Coach Harold Olsen.

Riley Castleman will stay at his post as track coach, assisted by George Haney, the Buckeyes' recent staff addition from Columbus North high school.

The other day my Mommie lost her beautiful new wrist watch! But 'stead o' sittin' down 'n cryin' like I've done, she jus' went straight to the 'phone 'n called up The News-Journal 'n told 'em she wanted to put a Want Ad in the Lost column. So yesterday a man called up 'n said he had Mommie's watch safe 'n sound, 'cause she lost it in his store, 'n she could come get it right away.

Don't you think my Mommie's sensible? I do!

Yes, it's just plain sensible to rush a Want Ad to The News-Journal the very minute you lose something. Recoveries are being made daily.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—(U.P.)—A permanent gallery devoted to paintings of scenes in the mineral industries has been opened at Pennsylvania State college.

Almost 150 paintings, representing scenes in mines, quarries, oil fields, refineries, steel mills and other mineral producing and processing industries of the state, make up the collection.

Organized by Dean Edward Steidle of the Penn State School of Mineral Industries, the gallery contains the paintings of 86 artists, most of them residents of Pennsylvania.

Norway's 1941 hay crop was only 70 per cent of normal.

MINOR PRICE SHIFTS CLOUD STOCK SCENE

Bank Clearings Fall Off 14 Per Cent During Week, Report Shows.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Minor price changes either way today continued to cloud the stock market's direction.

Up a shade were General Foods, Phelps Dodge, General Motors, Consolidated Editon, Atlantic Coast Line and General Electric. Declines were posted for U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Glenn Martin, Corn Products and Goodrich.

Boardrooms found nothing particularly cheering in the Dun & Bradstreet summary placing bank clearings in 28 cities during the week ended Wednesday at 14.4 per cent under the week before. It was not overlooked though that the aggregate still was 8.2 per cent above the comparable period last year.

Holders of building material issues were encouraged by the survey of the Engineering News-Record estimating heavy engineering awards for the week concluded Tuesday were up 75 per cent over the previous week and exceeded the like 1941 week by 50 per cent. Government contracts accounted mainly for the expansion.

6 SOLONS BACK MOVE TO BETTER WAR INDUSTRY

The News-Journal, Kyle Monday declared "we should all get out of the rocking chair and go to work" on the proposition of bringing more war industry to Mansfield.

"I think it is our duty," Kyle said, "to bring back to Mansfield all the workers forced to find jobs elsewhere. Mansfield should begin to stir itself out of its sleep and made some progress."

Following the naming Tuesday of a "war industry board" headed by Attorney C. H. Henkel the Retail Merchants association yesterday unanimously voted full cooperation.

Councilmen Paul W. Bush, Sixth ward, and James R. Anderson, at-large, could not be reached for statements.

Here are the attitudes expressed today by other members of council:

Russell Porch, Ward 1 and finance committee chairman: "Council must go much further than merely endorsing meritorious war industry programs. There is a tremendous financial obligation indicated in providing adequate water supply and extension of mains; sewage problems and repair of streets, police and fire protection, and various other issues. However, council should, and I'm sure would unanimously support in fullest measure possible, an industrial expansion in Mansfield."

C. N. Shultz, Ward 2: "I haven't any statement to make—no remarks whatever."

Clifford Knarr, Ward 3: "I'm for anything by which council can assist the Chamber of Commerce committee or any other agency interested in obtaining a war or other industry which will provide employment for our workers and be an asset toward insuring our future good."

Fred Miller, sr., Ward 5: "No one person can be blamed because we, as a community, didn't make these moves two years ago. "I'll gladly go a thousand miles out of my way to aid in bringing industry to Mansfield and will co-operate in every way with any group seeking to land a defense plant for this city."

Michael Mihalick, Ward 4: "I certainly will support wholeheartedly any movement designed to bring any beneficial industry to Mansfield. As a councilman, viewing possible extensions of various services, I'm sure the federal government will grant the city whatever priority and allocation requests that might become necessary. I'm 100 per cent behind any war effort."

Roy W. Vaughn, councilman-at-large: "I have always been for anything that will benefit Mansfield and I am in favor of council taking some action assuring its cooperation in any movement to obtain anything that will help Mansfield."

Howard G. Miller, council president: "Inasmuch as I do not have a vote in council proceedings, except to break a tie, there is no statement I can make officially." Miller declared, however, that in all other capacities he is heartily behind any war effort.

13 KILLED IN AIR CRASHES

11 Die as Transport Falls at Minneapolis; Two Army Craft Crack Up.

hap and three more were believed to be in the debris.

The first seven to be identified were named as employes of Northwest Airlines which has undertaken to train men for army air transport commands.

They were:

P. Kenneth Olson, of Minneapolis, formerly of Rice Lake, Wis., and John Fischer, of Fremont, O., pilots.

Leonard O. Larson, mechanic.
Leo D. Husley, mechanic.
Wilbur C. Rose, junior mechanic.
Paul F. Parlie, junior mechanic.
Winston A. Luchau, junior mechanic.

2 Killed; Cameraman 'Chutes To Safety

VICTORVILLE, Calif. — (AP) — Two men were killed and a third, Frank Filan, veteran photographer of the Associated Press, parachuted to safety in an accident involving two army bombardment training planes last night.

Killed were Sgt Pilot Rodney M. Grim, 20, of the army air force, and Clarence L. Block, 29, Los Angeles, civilian photographer for the west coast army air forces training center.

Filan was found wandering, dazedly on the desert this morning, seven hours after the accident, by Lt. Clarence M. Skaggs and Lt. Col. A. J. McVea, who had set out in a jeep on a search, on the slender hope that the cameraman might have been able to use his parachute.

Filan was exhausted when he was found and was suffering from ankle and chest injuries and scalp lacerations.

MANSFIELD NEWS IN BRIEF

Submits Bid—The Gamewell company of Pittsburgh submitted a bid of $2,875 for supplying a new fire alarm signal system for central station. The lone bid was received by Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff yesterday.

Picnic Scheduled — Columbia grange of Lexington will hold its annual picnic at 7:30 p. m. Saturday at North Lake park pavilion, grange officials announced today.

Forfeits Bonds—Failing to appear in municipal court this morning, Waldo E. Roszman, 37, of East Cleveland, forfeited $25 bond posted following his arrest on a speeding charge yesterday afternoon on U. S. Route 42.

Finds Bicycle—A bicycle found along U. S. Route 42 two miles east of Mansfield was turned over to the sheriff's office today by Ted Troupe, 195 East Fourth street. The license on the bicycle was issued in Cleveland, officers said.

One Bidder—The Mohican Chevrolet company was the only bidder offering to furnish a new service car for the waterworks department. The bid, received by Service Director Fred B. Wolff, Wednesday, quoted prices from $857.53 to $946.33 for passenger car models. Bids of $50 for a 1930 Ford coupe and $100 for a 1935 Reo truck used by the department also were offered.

Illegal Rider Fined — Russell Swain of Ashland, was fined $10 and costs in municipal court today when arraigned on a charge of illegal train riding. Swain was arrested shortly after 1 a. m. by N. N. Schmaltz, Pennsylvania railroad detective.

Chaplain Dead—Mansfield veterans of the 37th division, World war I, have been advised of the death recently of Major Alfred J. Funnell, wartime chaplain of the 145th infantry, and for many years pastor of Presbyterian churches at Norwalk and Sandusky. For three years prior to his death he served as chaplain of the Ohio Soldiers and Sailors Home, Sandusky.

THIS IS A MATTER OF GOOD BUSINESS

When you make a choice that saves you money, that's good business.

If you cast your vote for a public official who has already proved his ability to spend wisely the taxpayers' money—that's smart, and playing it safe.

Richland County is out of debt. It is being operated within its income. County-wide improvements have been effected at rock-bottom cost. That means you pay lower taxes.

Simple, isn't it? It's just a matter of good business to vote for the man who helped to bring about this situation. Think it over.
